Cup Back in City after 41 Years

Tension Grows in Hanoi As Hundreds Flee Reds

(From AP and UP Dispatches)

HANOI, Indo-China—The people of this northern Indo-China metropolis have begun the rush to get out ahead of the Reds and Americans without urgent business were told Saturday to leave at once.

The anti-Communist Vietnamese are leaving by the hundreds daily for the less-menaced south rather than face the keen possibility of life under the Vietminh here.

All planes flying out of Hanoi were loaded and the airlines were booked up for more than two weeks.

Qualified observers estimated that 20,000 Viet Namese already had fled Hanoi. Supreme French Commander Gen. Paul Ely advised a delegation representing the capital's 6,000 Frenchmen to get out soon because the city probably will be a battle ground, reliable sources said.

Rumors said Ely ordered an airlift to fly out the French either to Haiphong or Saigon.

British authorities have made preparations to bring Royal Air Force planes from Singapore to evacuate Commonwealth citizens if necessary, informed sources said.

SITUATION SERIOUS

Tension that could quickly flare into panic or desperate revolt spread among thousands who cannot pay the price of a plane ride over the surrounding jungles and mountains.

There are no safe roads leading out of Hanoi to the relative safety of Saigon, 700 miles away.

A mounting stream of refugees is pouring into Hanoi in front of the Vietminh attack. Between 75,000 and 100,000 refugees have swelled the normal population of 300,000.

DEEP HATRED

But for every Vietnamese here angry at the thought of a possible French retreat from this beleaguered city, there are uncounted others who have long nursed a deep hatred for their French colonial rulers.

If they become convinced the French are pulling out, an unfortunate incident could fan that smouldering resentment into a "last chance" blood letting.

"The day I learn we have been sold out, I will take my gun, go into the streets, and shoot the first three French I see," one Vietnamese told an American here.

The French high command is acutely aware the situation could develop into a native uprising like the 1946 outbreak which killed hundreds of Europeans and Eurasians.

Jammed Horn Brings Aid

Rescuers were led to the scene of this accident last night by the blare of the car's horn, which jammed after the vehicle had skidded 210 feet, smashed over a 12-foot embankment, then slewed to a stop in heavy growth that concealed it off the West Saanich Road. Johnny Cooper, 26, of Saanich Post Office received serious head and knee lacerations; his wife, Rita, 22, suffered a bad eye injury, and the third passenger, Janet Paul, West Saanich Road, received injuries to her left hip. All three are in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Pleas to Dulles Renewed

Mendes-France Back in Geneva

GENEVA (AP)—French Premier Pierre Mendes-France flew to Geneva Saturday night and plunged immediately into tough negotiations for peace in Indo-China within the next 10 days.

The French leader, who has staked his premiership on obtaining peace by July 20, was the dinner guest of Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov within an hour after his arrival.

At the same time the British Foreign Office in London disclosed it has urgently renewed its suggestion to U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that he return to the conference table here. This coincided with French representations to Dulles urging him to put in an appearance.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is expected to arrive here Monday and to lunch with Mendes-France. Red China's Foreign Minister Chou En-Lai is on his way to Geneva.

His arrival will complete the reappearance here of the top foreign policy leaders of the Big Four powers and Red China (except for Dulles).

Ratify Pact or...

U.S. May End Aid To France, Italy

WASHINGTON (AP)—An abrupt end of all foreign aid to France and Italy unless those two countries ratify the long-stalled European defense army or an acceptable substitute by December 31 was recommended Saturday by the senate foreign relations committee.

The decision was made a tentative part of the big foreign aid bill and acting chairman H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) said it would be sent on to the Senate floor Monday unless the State Department protests that it would cause "some dire trouble."

If approved by Congress and President Eisenhower, the threatened cutoff of U.S. aid funds and supplies would be the most drastic step taken thus far in efforts to end the stalemate over plans for a six-nation European army.

In another action the foreign relations committee hammered a "keep Red China out of the United Nations" notice onto the global aid bill.

The notice, with a request for instructions from President Eisenhower if it is ignored, was put there for all the world to see at the insistence of Sen. Knowland of California, the Republican Senate floor leader.

It was a modified version of the "or else we quit" sign which Knowland first proposed as an integral part of the bill authorizing more than $4,000,000,000 in U.S. aid to Western allies during the 12 months that started July 1.

Knowland, in announcing the committee's acceptance of his proposal, declared he was not swerved "one iota" from his determination to resign his senate leadership post and devote all of his energies to pulling this country and its financial support out of the U.N. if Red China is admitted.

50,000 Homeless

Raging Torrents Sweeping Europe

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Central Europe's worst floods in 50 years swept behind the Iron Curtain Saturday, pouring into the Czechoslovak capital of Prague.

In Austria and Germany up to 50,000 persons were believed homeless.

The Communist radio at Prague said parts of the Troja and Liben Islands in the Vltava-Moldau River in the middle of Prague were under water.

Raging waters of the wreck-ridden Danube meanwhile poured into the Austrian steel city of Linz as a great inland sea built up in the heart of Germany's and Austria's richest farmland.

Hundreds of German and Austrian villages are under water. Many of them are deserted. Fourteen persons are known dead. Many are missing. Thousands, including hundreds of American troops, are engaged in rescue work.

Radio Prague said the mounting waters of the Danube also were threatening villages near Bratislava and along the Czech-Hungarian border. Czech army, police, border guards and fire brigades were busy evacuating them, the broadcast said.

Furniture Afloat In Downtown Trail

The rampaging Columbia River continued to rise in the flood-stricken Interior yesterday, but the Fraser River was going down slowly.

In Trail, floating porch furniture, boots, bottles, and tin cans drifted along the esplanade as streets near the river went under. Part of the downtown area was covered by three inches of water.

Seven sewer pumps have been put into operation to remove pressure built up by high water. Five families were forced to flee basement suites.

Civil defense officials and Mayor E. G. Fletcher still believe the situation "is a cause for concern but not alarm." River levels are still five feet below the peak of 1948.

North of Golden, two feet of water was lapping over a half-mile stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway, and on the Kootenay-Columbia Highway two 500-foot stretches were inundated.

The Kimberley-Wasa-Fort road was closed.

At Castlegar the Columbia rose five inches. An emergency water supply system had to be set up.

Diplomats Act Undiplomatic

LONDON (Reuters)—Two unidentified diplomats were wounded Saturday in a gunfight near Buckingham Palace.

The shooting took place in the vicinity of the Dominican Republic consulate, Scotland Yard announced, but diplomatic immunity was immediately clamped on the case. The wounded men are officials of the Dominican consulate.

One of the men fell at the foot of the consulate steps while the other staggered around a corner and collapsed. Both are in critical condition in hospital.

Princess' Visit to Bonn Hailed by West Germans

BONN (AP)—The visit of Princess Margaret to Bonn next Monday is regarded by the German government as another welcome sign of West Germany's increasing role in world affairs.

The 23-year-old Margaret will be the first member of the British Royal Family to come to the West German capital.

There have been frequent visits by members of the family, such as the Dukes of Edinburgh and Gloucester and the Princess Royal to the British zone since the war. But they have confined themselves to inspecting British troops and have paid no official calls on the German authorities.

The Adenauer government said her visit demonstrates the federal republic's equal place among the Western nations.

Swiss Bar Investigators

BERN, Switzerland (UP)—Switzerland has refused a U.S. loyalty board permission to enter this neutral nation to investigate Americans employed by the United Nations, reliable sources said Saturday night.

Atom Strike Called Off

WASHINGTON (AP)—A strike threatening production of atomic and hydrogen bombs was called off Saturday and a "gratified" President Eisenhower discarded plans to seek a Taft-Hartley Law injunction against it.

CIO atomic workers voted 32,696 to return to work immediately at the atomic energy project near Paducah, Ky., reversing a decision Friday night to continue the walkout.

Six Rescued On Yacht

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (UP)—The coast guard said it rescued Marshall Field, Chicago publisher and department store heir, with his wife and four other persons Saturday after his luxury yacht stuck fast on a rocky ledge in the Outer Woods Hole Harbor.

Field, 60, his wife Ruth, 57, their 19-year-old daughter Fiona and three professional crew men were taken ashore as the yacht lay over on its side.

Terrorists Kill Five French

FERRYVILLE, Tunisia (UP)—Five Frenchmen were machine-gunned to death and nine others wounded last night in the worst outbreak or terrorist violence in two months.

Bowler-Wearers Sure of Salute

LONDON (Reuters)—A public controversy exploded Saturday over an order requiring the plumed, red-coated sentries of Britain's Horse Guards to salute all gentlemen passers-by wearing "bowler" hats and carrying umbrellas.

The mass-circulation Daily Mirror disclosed that the order had been put through to ensure salutes for off-duty Guards officers, who are required by regulations to wear derby-style bowlers and carry tightly-rolled umbrellas when not in uniform.

Guards officers rate a salute from sentries even when in civilian attire and are supposed to respond by tipping their bowlers. But sentries, confused by swarms of passing bowlers, frequently failed to recognize and salute their commanders, The Mirror said. The lack of recognition angered young officers strolling down the street with debutante girl friends.

Pin-up photographs of officers' features in guardsmen's barracks failed to solve the recognition problem, The Mirror said. So the order went out that "all Guardsmen will salute all men who walk through Horse Guards parade dressed in bowlers and carrying umbrellas."

Aircraft Battles Storm

Mattfolk was struck down by a thrashing steel cable while working at Sidney Bay Logging Company near Rock Bay, 30 miles north of here.

Dr. N. B. Hall was flown to the accident scene by pilot Wally Wiggins. The small plane was buffeted by the gale before it landed on Campbell River shortly before 9 p.m.

Brownie Keeps Vigil on Grave of Boy He Loved

Bereaved Dog Dying of Broken Heart

BOYNE CITY, Mich. (UP)—Brownie, a mongrel dog who traveled 16 miles to keep a vigil on the grave of the only real friend he ever had, his seven-year-old master, appeared yesterday to be dying from a broken heart.

The dog, who had to be dragged from the grave where he was awaiting the return of Raymond Sobleski, Jr., stretched out forlornly—his head slumped between his paws—at the home of the boy's father, Raymond, Sr.

Marell Abbey, county dog warden and Humane Society worker, said the dog seemed to be dying from a broken heart.

The dog disappeared from the Sobleski home this week after waiting for more than two weeks for Raymond to come riding up on his bicycle again. He was found three days later, lying on the boy's grave.

Lyle Gerrin, who operates a boarding house near St. Francis Cemetery in Petoskey, where the boy was buried after drowning in Deer Lake three weeks ago, said the dog had kept vigil on the grave for two days.

Brownie's paws were bruised and badly cut from the long journey. A veterinarian patched up the paws. But the boy's father, Raymond, Sr., said no one has been able to cheer up the dog.

"What can a vet or anybody do for a broken heart?" the father asked.

Brownie had been to the cemetery twice before his journey this week. He had attended the boy's funeral and had visited the grave once with the family. Each time they had a hard time getting the dog to leave.

He and Raymond had been inseparable ever since Raymond got the dog when Brownie was weaned 14 months ago. They were a familiar sight in the neighborhood. Raymond rode his bike and Brownie loped alongside.

After the funeral Brownie sat and waited for more than two weeks for Raymond to return home before he traveled to the grave.

The family tried to interest Brownie in the younger children in the family, a boy and a girl. But the best Brownie ever managed was a feeble wag of his tail.

The dog's vigil was discovered by Gerrin. He said Brownie only left the grave when he saw boys nearby. He said Brownie then would run to the boys, inspect them closely, and limp back to the grave.

Gerrin thought Brownie was a stray. He tried to chase him unsuccessfully, then turned his own dog on Brownie.

"But I couldn't get my dog to drive him off," he said. "Somehow he knew something and wouldn't chase him."

ALL ABOARD

With G. E. Mortimore

A LIGHTNING flash from America's political thunderstorm showed on our horizon last week.

Captain Elmer Strom, who was once a Communist, lost his job with Seattle fire department as an aftermath of the visit of the House Un-American Activities Committee to Seattle.

When the committee was in Seattle, Strom refused to answer most of the questions that were put to him. He took shelter behind the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which guarantees among other things that no person need give witness against himself, and that no person should be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

Later, Fire Chief William Fitzgerald called him into the office and asked him why he had parried the questions. Strom's answers were "unsatisfactory," Fitzgerald said.

* * *

Because of his reticence before the Un-American Activities Committee, and in the chief's office, Strom this week was dismissed from the fire department after 25½ years, "for conduct unbecoming a city employee, and for the good of the service."

After his appearance in front of the committee, Strom told a Seattle newspaper, the Post-Intelligencer, that he had been a member of the Communist party between 1940 and 1951. In the latter year he quit the party. He said he would tell the FBI the things which he had refused to tell the committee, but he did not keep his promise.

* * *

In dismissing the fire captain, his chief made no specific charges against Strom, except to say "The dismissal results from certain questions raised concerning his invoking the Fifth Amendment . . ."

The chief got legal opinion stating it was needless to prove violation of any specific law or rule in discharging an employee "for the good of the service."

There is doubt that Strom will get the $125 a month pension for which firemen become eligible after 25 years' service. Leaves of absence, suspensions and other time is deductible.

* * *

Briefly, therefore, Strom was dismissed because he stood by his legal rights and refused to answer questions about his past politics. He was charged with no offense. He never appeared before a court of law.

And yet he lost his job, and he may lose his pension.

Strom was deprived of property without due process of law—the very punishment that the U.S. constitution was supposed to prevent.

Ironically enough, he suffered that punishment because he invoked the law which was designed to protect him.

Communism is dangerous folly. Political inquisition is one of its ugliest consequences. And yet here we have Americans committing exactly the sin that they hate in the Russians.

True, the penalties are milder. The Russians often take away a man's life for dangerous thoughts. The Americans simply take away his livelihood and his good name.

The Case of the LINCOLN KILLER

BY CARL G. HODGES

(Text copyright, 1954, Carl G. Hodges. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.)

His voice was as high-pitched as a woman's.

Only after my surprise died did I realize the meaning of the words he had spoken. "Don't act hard-to-get with me, Lorelei. I got power to make a deal with you, baby. You give me them letters and I'll give you a grand. We'll go that high, but no higher."

I said stiffly, "I don't know what you're talking about. My name is not Lorelei. She is my sister."

His smile was veiled, venomous. "Listen baby, I trailed you from the LaSalle in a cab. I'd know that outfit you're wearing anywhere. And don't try that sister gag on me. I'll give you the offer once more. One thousand dollars. Or a lot of trouble. We ain't fooling, baby."

"I'm not Lorelei. She is my sister. We frequently dress alike. I was her stand-in, her understudy."

His lips pulled back and his words hissed at me. "This is your last chance, baby. One grand—or trouble, you name it.

At that moment the forward door of the club car opened and a slim, evil-faced man in brown gabardine entered. He glanced at the man in the checkered coat, whose back was turned to him. He had black eyes with tiny crow's feet around the corners. I guessed his age at around 40. His satanic look I attributed to the smallest ears I have ever seen on a man.

The man in the checkered coat took one quick glance sideways and noticed the new arrival. I saw surprise and then a kind of fear on his face. Then he ducked his head, made for the door, and disappeared.

The man with the pointed ears stared at me. His eyes met mine and he nodded, without smiling. He pulled out the chair next to me and sat down. "I hate to ride backwards on trains," he said, "do you mind?"

I didn't smile. First it was the man in the checkered coat and now this character who looked like he belonged in a stock show melodrama. Neither was the pick-up type.

I said, my voice brittle, "Do you affect everybody that way?"

His brows drew together. "Everybody? What way?"

"The man in the checkered coat that was talking to me. The moment he saw you he look scared and got away—but quick!"

The waiter came with a bourbon and water and placed it on the table. The man beside me reached for his pocket, but the waiter said, "Compliments of the man at the bar, sir."

"What man?"

The waiter looked back at the bar, then said, "He shore done evaporated quick." He went back to the bar, shaking his head.

A sudden suspicion alerted my brain. "If you're a detective," I said, "your face must have looked just like a badge to the man in the checkered coat."

"I'm not that type," said the man. "You might say that I'm a safety engineer. My name is Bruce Jamison, Lorelei." His eyes laughed as he pronounced the name, as if he was playing a big joke on me, exposing a stage and movie star who was trying to remain incognito. "What did the man look like? Why would he be following you?"

"He looks like a pugilist," I said. "And I think he's following me for the same reason you are: he, too, thinks I'm Lorelei. I'm not."

"Don't kid me. I caught the Gentleman from Sangamon one night last week. I thought you were swell. I've always liked your movies, too." The corners of his mouth twisted in a rakish way as he asked, "Have you ever met John Tracy?"

"Not only have I never met him, I've never even heard of him. Is he a safety engineer, too?"

"John Tracy," he said, " is a newcomer to Springfield where you're going. Sort of a musical genius; from Memphis, Tennessee. Spent about four weeks in a hospital there. Broke his arm when the stage of a little theatre collapsed. They tell me he can play just about every musical instrument known to man.

"Funny thing about him," Jamison continued, "in height, weight and with full beard and top hat, he's a dead ringer for the great Lincoln. He's joined the Springfield Players and he's going to play the title role in the Gentleman from Sangamon."

"That will be interesting," I said, "Lincoln speaking with a drawl." I got up, unsmiling. "I am not Lorelei. I'm her sister, Penelope. Now, if you'll excuse me, I'll go back to my own car."

Arms Cache Captured By Guatemala Agents

GUATEMALA CITY (UP) — Intelligence agents captured former interior minister Ricardo Chavez Nackmann and a veritable arsenal of hidden weapons in the home of a member of the short-lived Diaz junta here Saturday.

An official announcement said agents sent to raid the home of former defense minister Jose A. Sanchez found Chavez guarding the arms hoard.

The captured weapons included a 30 m.m. automatic cannon, six machine guns with five spare barrels, 21 tommy guns, several chests of grenades, with a sizeable quantity of ammunition and miscellaneous other equipment.

Sanchez, whose whereabouts now are unknown, was a member of the three-man military Junta headed by Col. Enrique Diaz that deposed pro-Communist president Jacobo Arbenz a week ago Sunday. Diaz was ousted two days later by Col. [illegible] Monzon, who was the third member of the Diaz Junta, served as provisional president until Thursday, when he was replaced by rebel leader Carlos Castillo Armas. He is a member of the three-man Junta, headed by Castillo, which now governs Guatemala.

Earlier Saturday, it was announced that the current Junta has decided to take over rich cotton plantations owned by Arbenz and other leaders of the ousted government.

This was the first punitive action known to have been taken against top leaders of the Arbenz regime, although the ex-president has been charged with murder and at least one minor official was executed last week.

The principal property affected by the intervention order is 3,460 acres owned by Arbenz, with an estimated yield of up to $1,000,000 a year.

The government also will take over plantations owned by two former cabinet members—Interior Minister Augusto Charnaud MacDonald and Agriculture Minister Nicholas Brol—and properties owned by Francisco Morazan and Carlos Bracamonte, not otherwise identified.

Reservists May Be Hired For Full-Time Army Jobs

The army's vice-chief of general staff, Maj.-Gen H. A. Sparling said here yesterday that units of battalion size or equivalent may now employ on continuous duty a man or woman for orderly room and quartermaster duties.

This policy of employing militia men full time is part of the sweeping re-organization of Canada's reserve army forces announced this week by army headquarters.

The new plan will eliminate the present arrangement where clerical assistance is provided from the regular army's instructional and administrative cadre.

Full-time employment of Canadian Women's Army Corps other ranks will now be allowed for the first time in Canada's peacetime history.

NO WORD OF PPCLI

General Sparling told the Colonist he didn't know of any possibility of the 2nd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, coming to Victoria when it returns from Germany.

Calgary papers have recently suggested in dispatches from Germany that the famous PPCLI would move to Victoria.

The general, second only to the top man in the Canadian army, admitted there was plenty of room at Work Point Barracks.

He was in Victoria yesterday for a short inspection of barracks and installations at the forts. He leaves today for Vancouver to attend a conference of the U.S. and Canadian joint board on defense.

It was only the second visit to Victoria for the army chief. He was here in 1942 for a rushed, two-hour inspection of installations.

LOT OF WORK

Reorganization of militia forces will start September 1 and there will be a lot of work adjusting stores, accounts and other routines before it becomes really effective, General Sparling said.

He forecast a more successful militia as a result of the reorganization. "We in the regular army rely very heavily on the militia," he said.

He hoped the public would take an increased interest in the militia, give it support and encourage the young men of the country to take an active interest in it.

"It is a real part of Canada's defenses, and we hope it will be a live part and fully supported by the community," he said.

He said complete details of the militia reorganization as it effects individual units will be issued shortly.

Strawberry Vale Plaque To Honor War Veterans

Mrs. R. G. Smith, mother of five Second World War veteran sons, all of whom attended Strawberry Vale School, will unveil a plaque next Thursday dedicated in memory of former students of the old Strawberry Vale School who served in the armed forces in both world wars.

The old school was built in 1892 and is still used by the Colquitz Co-operative Play Group as a pre-primary school in the school season and the Rosedale Playground in summer.

Ceremony will take place at the school at 8 p.m. next Thursday. It will coincide with the official opening of the Rosedale Playground.

Rev. F. Staley of Wilkinson United Church will open the playground and read a short prayer of dedication for the plaque. Philip Dye, president of Strawberry Vale PTA, will officiate at the ceremonies, and schoolboard chairman Walter Jeune and trustee Mrs. W. McGill will be guests and judges of a fancy dress parade.

Princess Alexandra Lodge, No. 18, Daughters of England, will meet on Wednesday, at 7.30 p.m. in the Orange hall.

Garden Notes

Creeper Good For Covering

BY M. V. CHESNUT

Creeping Charlie—D. T., Sidney. I have only encountered two varieties of Creeping Charley — the common kind, and a variegated type with a silver margin to each green leaf, used quite frequently in hanging baskets and window boxes.

Creeping Charlie is very invasive, and if you use it as a ground cover to clothe a difficult spot near your lawn, it is best to sink a strip of sheet metal in the ground, as you would with mint, to keep Charlie from taking over the lawn.

The specimen you sent me appears to be one of the Thyme family. It would make a satisfactory ground cover, but it is a bit more difficult to get established on a large scale, and, of course, it must have full sun.

Dying Walnut Tree—A. C. S., Esquimalt. I don't know of any disease of the walnut family which would kill off the upper branches so suddenly, leaving the lower ones untouched. I think your theory of fumes from your chimney must be correct, inasmuch as you only started burning briquettes this spring. I imagine there are volatile substances in the briquettes which have vaporized and drifted from your chimney to the upper branches of your tree. If you eliminate the cause of the trouble, there is a good chance of saving the tree.

I suggest that you feed and water it heavily, to try to induce it to put forth a second crop of leaves. Use a standard fertilizer such as Vigoro or Uplands Special. Make holes in the ground a foot apart in a circle around the tree immediately under the outermost reach of the branches, using a crowbar or soil auger, and put about a cupful of fertilizer in each hole. Water it in VERY thoroughly.

Asparagus Kale — D.C.M., Duncan. Thank you very much for your interesting notes on this vegetable which, I have to confess, I have never grown. I am going to pass your information on to our other readers.

"A vegetable we think is marvellous is Asparagus Kale. As yet I have found only one grower besides myself. It can be eaten long before the first spinch or lettuce, and if kept well cut will keep on bearing for months. We are still eating ours, and the new shoots are as tender as ever. For flavor, we think it is much superior to spinach. It is excellent in salads, too, and chipped into any soup a few minutes before serving, adds a beautiful bit of color."

Morning Glory "Heavenly Blue"—F.M., Victoria. While it is a bit too late to sow your morning glory seeds outdoors and see them bloom, I suggest that you try one or two as house plants. Don't let them run up into a vine, but pinch the top off when the plant is about a foot high, and nip off the end of each side shoot after it has made three leaves.

This will make a nice, compact, bushy specimen, and it will still bear its glorious blue trumpet flowers. Give it the sunniest window in the house.

Wood Lice—G.M., Duncan. These creatures are not true insects at all, but crustaceans, related more closely to crabs and shrimps than to bugs. While they can be quite a nuisance in a greenhouse or cold frame, they don't seem to be very destructive in the open garden, and certainly they can do no harm as long as they stal in your manure pile.

While they could be dispatched with chlordane dust, or poisoned with paris green and sugar, I'm afraid this would reduce the worm population of your compost heap, which is undesirable.

One of the best ways I know of for cleaning up an infestation of wood lice is to turn some chickens loose in their haunts. However, if you are not losing any seedling plants, I'd leave them alone. They must be playing some obscure part in nature's plan.

Marksmen Make Changes

It's All in the Grip For Pistol Experts

BY ALEC MERRIMAN

A pistol is a pistol to most people but pistols used by many of the Northwest's top marksmen, now competing in Victoria tournaments, are the oddest looking things.

They fire all right, and very accurately, too, but when a revolver expert gets through moulding his own grip it looks like something out of this world.

Not all the revolvers are altered, but many of the best marksmen change the pistol grip to fit their hands.

You see on the range everything from beautifully designed grips made of walnut and other fine woods right down to those moulded with plastic wood and electric tape.

SPECIAL CASES

Each marksman has his own carrying case which he takes with him to the firing line. The cases, which look like oversize fishing boxes, have in them everything required for a revolver shoot.

Three or four guns are carried, each in its own position in racks.

In the top of the case is a telescope and when the case is open it makes into a telescope stand. Shooting glasses, screwdrivers for adjusting sights, other tools, and the very necessary ear plugs are also packed in place.

There are more than 1,000 pistol shooters in British Columbia and the sport is on the increase. In Victoria there are three clubs—The South Vancouver Island Rangers, Inc., the Victoria City Police Revolver Club, and the Capital City Revolver Club.

FREE OF CRIME

Although there are more pistol shooters and pistol clubs in British Columbia, there has never been a record of a pistol club member getting mixed up in crimes involving pistols.

Each pistol shooter usually has three or four revolvers—a .38 Smith and Wesson or Colt, a .22-calibre auto-loading revolver, and a .45 automatic Colt for use in U.S. competitions. The 9 mm. Browning is now used by the army in Canada, but is so new it is not yet widely used in club competitions.

Permits for carrying pistols are issued for target practice at a recognized pistol club and come under the supervision of the RCMP.

SECOND TOURNEY

Mrs. G. Backstrom, Hoquiam, Wash., was top winner annexing eight championships, including the Vancouver Island open pistol championship and the Vancouver Island open women's pistol championship.

Mrs. Patricia Isaac, Victoria, mother of three children, won the Vancouver Island closed women's pistol championship and was away out in front of Mrs. Vi. Follis, defending champion, who placed second.

TEAM WINNERS

Ranger W. D. Payne won the tyro trophy donated by J. A. Betts, Sr., chairman of the pistol committee. Ranger Payne also won the Rivett-Carnac handicap trophy.

Ranger Bob Settle won the most difficult shoot of the day which was the 100-yard sweepstakes.

Merrill Follis of the Capital City Revolver Club took the Vancouver Island closed pistol championship and a trophy donated by Mayor Claude Harrison. He also won the individual centre fire, rapid fire championship.

J. E. Steele of the Seattle police won the slow-fire, individual .22-match, the time-fire, individual .22-match, and the .22 individual aggregate.

Drift Pushes Raft Wrong Way; Fishboat's Tow Helps It West

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — The 32-foot raft Lehi manned by five amateur sailors tossed and rolled 10-15 miles off the Golden Gate Saturday, making little progress on a planned 2,200 mile voyage to Hawaii.

A Stanford University oceanographer was skeptical that the ocean currents would carry the plank raft directly to their tiny destination and said "I wouldn't want to try it."

The Coast Guard said the Lehi, towed 12 miles to sea late Friday, had drifted back 10 miles during the night, then recovered all but one mile lost and finally lost four miles.

The fishing boat Sea Scout left here late Saturday to tow the Lehi 75 miles seaward to escape coastal winds and currents whose ebb and flow stymied the craft's progress.

The Lehi was reported lying in the water 10-15 miles southeast of the Farallon Islands, 25 miles off the California coast, her small sail set in attempts to catch a seven-mile-an-hour wind from the northwest.

Meanwhile a ham radio operator reported intercepting a message from the raft reporting that the crew caught a fish at 2 p.m. (PDT)—their first since leaving San Francisco Bay at 4 p.m. Friday without food or water.

The men expected to live off the sea by catching fish and plankton marine life. Drinking water was to come from rain squalls or a navy portable distillery.

Prof. Rolf Bolin of Stanford's Hopkins Marine Station at Pacific Grove said the raft probably would drift in the general direction of Hawaii but was likely to be carried too far south.

"The general oceanic sweep of the current is 200 miles out," he said, "and if they can get that far the clockwise motion of the current helped by the northeast trade winds will carry them in a southerly direction.

"Hawaii is a pretty small place to hit. They may be carried too far south and miss the islands entirely."

Bolin said he believed the amateur seafarers could subsist off the sea "but it's not a very comfortable way to live."

He said while near shore they ought to be able to net rich supplies of plankton including the copepod specie which is simila rto small shrimp.

The expedition was led by DeVere Baker, 38-year-old Mormon elder who was inspired by the Book of Mormon to make the trip. He eventually plans to float the Lehi some 20,000 miles from Saudi Arabia to Guatemala to prove that such a raft voyage actually was made by a Jewish priest in 600 B.C. as described in the Book of Mormon.

Baker calls the trip to Hawaii a "shakedown cruise." He expects to reach the islands in six weeks.

BY TOM GREEN
Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

OTTAWA — First commercial shipment of iron ore from the Quebec-Labrador deposits is scheduled to leave Seven Islands, Quebec, on July 31 for either Philadelphia or Baltimore, according to word received here Saturday by the mines department. The shipment, totaling 19,000 tons, will be carried aboard the converted C-4 freighter Hawaiian, from the pier of the Iron Ore Co. of Canada.

This is the beginning of the pay off on the investment of 12 years and $250,000,000 to develop a huge sub-Arctic reserve of ore that may some day take the place of the thinning Mesabie Range in Minnesota and supplement the Steep Rock deposits in Ontario.

LINE COMPLETED

The last spike in the 360-mile railroad from Seven Islands to the Knob Lake region was driven in five months ago, permitting ore trains to start running. Direct shipping of ore over the railway started several days ago. By the time the Hawaiian is ready for loading, this shipping ore will have been used to test the materials handling installations of the new pier.

The iron ore company hopes to move out as much as one million tons of the rich ore from the Labrador border before the close of the shipping season this year. The company is reported to be shooting at 10,000,000 tons next year.

According to present plans, about two million tons of next year's ore will go up the St. Lawrence River to steel mills in Hamilton and Cleveland. Fifty Canadian vessels that are able to navigate the present waterway past Montreal to Lake Ontario and Lake Erie ports have already been chartered by the iron ore company to transport ore from a depot near Montreal. The ore will be brought up river as far as Montreal by ships comparable to the Hawaiian.

Construction of the railroad, the key to getting out the iron that was mined in open pits, began late in 1950. The prize ore bed is estimated to contain 417,000,000 tons of ore with 55 to 65 per cent iron content.

No Mummy in Sarcophagus

The tomb was expected to yield the mummy of a Pharaoh who lived some 5,000 years ago, but when opened, the sarcophagus was empty.—(Central Press Canadian.)

Low-Lying Brandon Homes Evacuated

Flood Crest Moving Eastward

BRANDON (CP) — A flood crest which earlier this week broke through dikes at Brandon and drove 50 families from their homes was moving slowly eastward today along the winding stream.

The river level, which reached a peak of 22 feet 2½ inches, had dropped to 21 feet 11½ inches Saturday. It was expected to continue to fall despite overnight rains along its course.

Downstream at Portage la Prairie, 50 miles west of Winnipeg, a four-inch rise was recorded overnight but officials said there was no immediate flood danger.

Government officials said undiked parts of the Portage la Prairie plains might be flooded when the crest reaches there next week. They said there is no danger of a flood in Winnipeg where the Assiniboine joins the Red River.

Unsung Hero Restores Peace in Home

BY MOSS HART

NEW YORK (NANA)—"Anniversary Waltz," in which the mother of my children is now starring on Broadway, concerns itself largely with the heartless impact of children on parents and vice versa.

It might, therefore, be pertinent again to expose my own views on the subject, since I am the father of the aforesaid children and the director of the above-mentioned play. These views are contained in the form of a letter written in a spirit of no levity to Bennett Cerf, and it follows in toto.

Dear Bennett:

Do you remember, one lovely starlit evening on the desert a few weeks ago, our discussing with a good deal of parental acrimony the proper method of bringing up children? That usually discerning and extremely wise lady, your wife, disagreed somewhat haughtily with the method we use in our house, but I thought you showed unusual interest in our experiment and silently longed to apply it yourself. I therefore pass it on to you and to any other frantic and harassed parents who, like ourselves, were about ready for the booby-hatch — until the Klobber method came into our household.

The Klobber method was invented by Ernest J. Klobber, a Viennese psychiatrist who, at the time of the discovery of the method which was to bear his name, was a staunch believer in the modern and accepted formula for rearing children. Give them a reason for everything—watch out for traumas—plenty of love and security—and never a harsh word.

So great an exponent of this formula was Professor Klobber that, at the time of his discovery, the professor, who had six children of his own, was about to be carted off to a sanitarium in a state of nervous collapse—a condition any modern parent will understand at once. As the hapless professor was being carried out of the house on a stretcher, one of the children aimed a kick at it which, with unerring childlike aim, landed exactly where it was meant to land.

The professor, though thoroughly used to being kicked by his children, was under mild sedation at the time, and it may have been this that caused a curious reflex action on his part. Bringing his arm up from the stretcher, he brought his hand down with a good sharp crack on the child's head.

There was an anguished howl from the child—first time in its life no reason had been given for an action—but the effect on the professor was startling. He leaped up from the stretcher and gave each of the other five kiddies in turn a good smart crack over the head—a klobber, as he afterwards termed it—and never went near the sanitarium. Instead, in suddenly excellent spirits and health, he began to develop the klobber method.

No reason was given for anything. "No" meant "no" and "yes" meant "yes," and, trauma or no trauma, at the first hint of an argument the children got a klobber, and life, for the professor and his good wife, was livable for the first time since the patter of little feet had thundered through the house.

Like all great discoveries, however, the Klobber method met with furious opposition on the part of leading educators and progressive parent organizations, and it was not until a refinement of the method was suggested by an imaginative assistant of the professor's that it began to meet with popular, if necessarily secretive, approval.

The professor's assistant, one Heinrich Klonk, suggested that, since a good klobber usually left a telltale lump, a short sideswipe, or a klonk, would do the trick just as well.

Heinrich Klonk is one of the unsung heroes of our time, for though he gets small credit for the klobber method, his little refinement worked like a charm, and the word "klonk" echoes through thousands of peaceful homes like a balm.

The charm of the method is its utter simplicity. In place of long hours of dreary explanation that Daddy cannot work if Junior bangs on the radiator, and if Daddy cannot work and make money, how will we go to the circus; in place of that tortured quiet between husband and wife in the long night hours as to which one warped the childish id by refusing to allow the hotfoot to be applied to Uncle Robert; in place of all that—just "klonk!" — and serenity reigns.

It is the greatest invention since the wheel, my dear fellow, and as your wife seems to object to it, try it on her first, instead of the children, and let me know the results. I'll still be over here—3,000 miles away—but I'd like to know what happens.

Ever Yours,
Moss Hart.

House Access Clear

Reports that two Esquimalt homes next to naval property had been isolated by the navy were termed incorrect yesterday by Reeve A. C. Wurtele.

A barrier erected by the navy to keep cars from a parking lot project prevented access to the two homes from Admirals Road.

But the reeve said the blocking is only temporary and will end soon. He added there is still access to the homes from other streets.

Access from Admirals Road has been virtually impossible because no road has been developed in the small area, although the municipality retained a road allowance when the property was sold to Ottawa.

HELSINKI, Finland (Reuters) — Luminous objects described by eye-witnesses as "flying saucers" and "Flying cigars" were seen in southeast Finland late Friday night.

In Imatra several people said they saw a "cigar-shaped rocket" flying from a westerly direction. They said it left a streak of fire behind.

Senior Citizens Expanding

The Senior Citizens' Association of British Columbia has enrolled 21 new branches in the province since April, including six which seceded from the Old Age Pensioners' organization.

George F. Edwards, president of the senior citizens' group, told a recent executive meeting in Vancouver that plans are also underway for organization of 12 to 15 new branches. Locations of the branches were not disclosed.

A committee was appointed to plan an endowment fund "to give strength and permanency to the association." The SCA convention is scheduled for Vancouver September 27 and 28.

Woodworkers Filing Unfairness Charges

PORTLAND, Ore. (UP) — The International Woodworkers of America (CIO) said yesterday it has started to send out charges of unfair labor practices against 508 employers involved in the current lumber strike in the Pacific Northwest and northern California.

E. W. Kennedy, union research director, said the task of filing the charges with National Labor Relations Board offices in San Francisco, Portland and Seattle would be completed today. The principal charge against the employers, according to Kenney, is a refusal of the employers to bargain in good faith.

The operators involved, who employ about 27,000 lumber workers in Oregon, Washington and California, were given special forms in December of last year to facilitate giving information on wages, hours, classifications, seniority and other working conditions.

The deadline for the information, Kenney said, was moved from January 30 to February 10, and has been renewed periodically since that date.

Going After Trade

IF the provincial government is serious about going after trade abroad the intended visit of the former finance minister, Einar Gunderson to Europe in early autumn will be welcomed by business circles in British Columbia. In addition to what the federal government has been able to achieve through the Dominion's trade commissioners there is always room for purposeful inquiry into market openings abroad. Premier Bennett is right when he states that trade should be an exchange operating fairly in both directions, otherwise the unilateral benefit soon dries up. British Columbia has much to offer to the world from its diversified output, both manufactured and raw.

In the United Kingdom, of course, Mr. Gunderson will find that Scandinavian countries are Canada's competitors. Lumber, pulp, fish and not a few other products from the continent are reaching the British market at prices below those that can be established by the equivalent British Columbia trade. Nor will negotiation be able to do much about that. On the other hand there may be a better opportunity in not a few lines where United Kingdom exports to this province are concerned. British steel has been coming this way for a long time. Certain types of machinery, leather goods and textiles are also saleable goods in this province. What must be borne in mind, however, is that without dollars in exchange United Kingdom importers will be strictly limited in their purchases on this coast however keen their desire.

Nonetheless it is always a sound move to widen inquiry and improve contacts abroad. Between what is being done already and what might upon investigation prove feasible may be a large and relatively little explored field. It is sensible to look in any event, and good may come of the mission.

The Navy's Yacht Fleet

PLEASED interest was aroused among Victoria's sailing fraternity by the announcement that Oreile IV, one of the Royal Canadian Navy's small fleet of sailing yachts, is to be brought from the East Coast to Esquimalt for duty in the navy's new Venture officer-training plan. Yet someone was overheard to inquire caustically why the navy with all its service ships should deem it necessary to maintain a lot of pleasure yachts at public expense.

The answer to that is in the splendid record of the "Wavy Navy" in two world wars. Without detracting from the value of service training or the exceptionally high calibre of those whom the permanent navy produced, it can be said that some of the best officers Canada had afloat in wartime were drawn from the salt and fresh-water yacht clubs. Already versed in the ways of the sea and in at least the rudiments of navigation, these young men needed only brief periods of training in naval routine and administration to fit them for responsibilities at sea, at a time when the navy needed every piece of officer material it could muster. Their record of gallantry and initiative forms one of the brightest chapters of naval history.

While to young officer cadets the RCN yachts may impart training in more pleasing form than that commonly associated with the naval grind, they are far from being the luxury adjuncts which the much misused word "yacht" may connote in some people's minds. For all the advances made in ship propulsion since Nelson's day, the navy wisely relies in some measure still on experience in sail to develop the qualities most needed in those intended for command and executive duties at sea.

In addition to practical instruction in seamanship and navigation, the handling of a wind-driven boat confronts a budding sailor with constantly changing situations demanding clear judgment, quick decisions and instant application of them. To those who like it, sailing is the ultimate in pleasure even under gruelling conditions; but in the training of those destined for a naval career proficiency in the art of sailing is also of immense practical value.

True to Soviet Form

ONE would like to welcome without bias foreign artists who come to entertain us. One would like to feel that if there were any innocent expression these difficult days it would be found in the friendly realms of dancing and music. On their own artistic merits the Soviet group of dancers, singers and musicians who toured Canada recently were sympathetically received, but how sad the denouement.

Back home in Russia they have reacted like all other visitors from the Soviet state. They too are harnessed to the political propaganda machine. Once more the United States is depicted as the villain of the piece, with Canadians captive to "its low-class culture" and "evil influence." Only Canadians who keep alive the Slavic traditions are worthy of praise, we learn; for the rest they are lumped as cultural satellites of the U.S.A. of the lowest mental order.

The influence of the neighboring republic on the life of Canada is not free from some elements less couth than might be desired, but between that and the influence of Communist Russia there can be only one choice. Canadians can turn aside from American influences they dislike, but once under the Soviet thumb and they would be helpless prisoners of Communist doctrine. The Soviet artists who speak slightingly of the land they recently visited are but one more example of this fateful truth. They also will make it difficult to regard future visitors from Russia with anything but distrust.

Island Editors Say

Forest Licenses

Premier Bennett's remarks about forest management licenses on V.I. touch on a subject about which the public generally seems to know very little. The basic idea is sound enough, of forests in perpetuity, as a means of ensuring jobs and plants indefinitely. A steadier economy will be all to the good. What has never been made too clear, however, is the place the small independent logger will have in the forest industry of the future . . .

Lack of any announcement by the forest department on rumored forest management licenses may conceivably be owing to the need to consider more carefully the future of the small operator. This area has always had its quota of small loggers. Will it have if licenses result in parcelling out much of the available timber only to firms large enough to make large capital investment?

The B.C. government has a large responsibility on its hands at present to decide what is best for the future in respect of forest management licenses. Premier Bennett's outlook offers confidence that a fair course will be taken.

Leadership Needed

We, with members of St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society, feel that there is something radically wrong when young people of the district fail to turn out for athletic contests such as those connected with the Highland Games.

We do not like to think that the younger generation here has given up competitive sports in favor of the passive entertainment offered by picture shows and television. In fact, the enthusiasm shown for basketball and baseball in the Twin Cities belies this theory.

Why is it then that, when it comes to track and field sports, only a handful of youngsters turn out to compete? Of these, practically none are from outside the high school.

The answer must be in the fact that there is a lack of leadership and training . . . Except for the coaching given in the schools, there is no help given to the young people who could become field and track athletes. The result is that when they leave school they give up training and lose interest . . .

A Name Is Changed?

Many old-timers of this district take very seriously the naming of various geographical areas and landmarks . . .

The federal government apparently thinks otherwise. Without any notification whatsoever, so far as The Review can learn, the name of Patricia Bay Airport has recently been charged to Victoria Airport. We cannot understand why the government in its wisdom has arbitrarily made this change. Surely some explanation is in order.

Latest issue of the official federal government's pilot's manual makes it clear that it is no longer Patricia Bay Airport. It is possible that we'll soon be advised that Patricia Bay is to be renamed Victoria Bay? Residents of North Saanich can be excused righteous indignation over the apparent effrontery of the federal government in this regard.

Ghost Cars

It is not surprising that the RCMP acted quickly on the suggestion of the local chamber of commerce that "ghost" cars be used for highway patrols. The police are always among the first to arrive at the scene of an accident. They lift the injured from the wrecked cars and notify the survivors when fatalities occur. To them a highway accident is not just a fleeting headline in a newspaper, it is a grim and bloody wastage of human resources.

To them the arguments that "ghost" cars are "unsporting" or "an invasion of individual privacy" must seem as bewildering as they are inconsistent . . .

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings"

By TOM TAYLOR

I WAS interested, and envious too I must confess, by Padre Hill's disclosure that he had finished reading Gibbon's "Decline and Fall." More than once I've promised myself that some day I'd wade through this massive masterpiece, if only to correct the Romanesque ideas that Cecil B. de Mille has planted in my mind.

I must therefore congratulate the padre on his staying power, even if he did take the odd night off during his three-year pilgrimage. It is here that my envy comes in, backslider that I am.

So much to do, so little time to do it in. This was Cecil Rhodes' complaint, and he never lived in the age of movies, radio, capsule magazines, and all the other divertissements of the modern menage. It is not easy to be a reader nowadays; that is, a leisurely reader.

Nor are we to be too severely condemned for our shortcomings. I have a suspicion that perhaps I'm now arguing to appease my conscience, which bothers me in this respect, nevertheless the impact of many-sided modern life on our minds is simply terrific. Nor is there practical escape from it.

Samuel Johnson said that a young man should read five hours every day to improve his knowledge, but few young men, if they belong to their era, can so apportion their spare hours. Unless he were cramming for an exam, and that would cover a relatively short period only, he'd be a monk or a hermit who could seclude himself thus.

And he would then miss half of what's going on outside.

* * *

In a way this might not seem much of a loss, but education comes via both reading and personal experience, and the printed word is not the sole spur to mental growth. Neither of course is TV or radio or popular picture books and I'm not suggesting such. I daresay I am excusing the lazy mind.

I notice the padre mentioned Gibbon's work as containing 4,228 pages, which is a lot of reading and it's no wonder most of us shrink from the very thought of Gibbon, although paradoxically some novels are published nowadays which run into a thousand pages and they are gobbled up eagerly. Gobbled is perhaps the right word too; they are not read in the sense that one reads Gibbon nor are their contents to be mentioned in the same breath.

Good books take contented reading, the kind that savors slowish absorption.

Yet knowing this I too fall by the wayside. I have a long line of Scott which hits me often in the eye with grave reproach. The volumes are bleakly bound in dull grim green, which I could suggest is what puts me off. The truth is of course that, like Gibbon, Scott seems too forbidding to tackle when I can skim in a jiff through the latest weekly magazine.

Keeping up with the world around me, you see.

* * *

A very prominent person once said that he read all of Scott and Gibbon every year, as a refresher, at which statement I can only gasp. I'm no slowpoke myself, although there's an annoying half of my mind which persists in checking facts as I go along and when it's uppermost my pace is reduced, but to swallow these classics as a swift sideline one must be able to read a page at a glance.

Man could not read all he would even in ten lifetimes. More people are literate than ever before—in the mechanical mastery of reading—but there is more and more to read come every year. Even a hermit with his nose between the pages all day long, missing his lunch and his supper too, couldn't cope with the flood of books that are published.

They are not all to be despised because they're written in our time either — posterity it is, remember, which classifies the classics.

It is maybe a pity this word was applied to books. Wrongly I suppose but truly just the same the word classic implies a kind of literary stuffiness that tends to shove one off in distaste. That and the improper approach to literature suffered by many of us in our school days.

I would like to read Gibbon nevertheless, if only I could summon to my aid Padre Hill's staying power.

On the Record

Genius Is Not Above Law

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

THE Oppenheimer case starts a train of thought about genius, and the phrase "egghead" applied to men of intellect.

Genius is rare and the phrase over-employed, especially in connection with intelligence tests, where a child is pronounced a "genius" if his I.Q. is 10 or 12 points above a given norm. Many of these little geniuses display in maturity neither genius nor exceptional achievement. One gathers they were, for their age, precocious and exceptionally knowledgable, the latter being due in part to environment.

It is dubious whether such tests, summed up in an average quotient, might not find a real genius subnormal on the average. Gifts in one field of studies are usually countered by deficiencies in others. The verbally gifted are likely to be morons at mathematics and vice versa. I have known personally some great writers and none could have solved a proposition in simple calculus, though they may once have passed a university examination in it by sheer memorizing.

Painters often are verbally inarticulate and may even appear stupid, though they often have good mathematical minds; and the affinity between music and mathematics has repeatedly been demonstrated.

It therefore seems that genius develops in one field at the expense of others, and that the genius has a lopsided mind. The "universal genius" of which Leonardo da Vinci is the most cited example is rare indeed, and the future probably will produce even fewer as expanding areas of knowledge impose more intensive specialization.

* * *

The genius is not someone who knows more than others eminent in his field. Genius discovers what nobody before had known or known fully. He is unique, different not only in degree of talent but in kind. Hence the phrase, "genius makes its own laws." Genius does make new laws.

Genius is, it would seem, a combination of knowledge, craft, imagination and intuition, so peculiar as to appear miraculous, the more so since it is no respecter of classes.

But a modern interpretation has been put on "genius makes its own laws." It is that genius is above the law and that the man of genius should be exempted, ipso facto, from the disciplines and restrictions that society puts upon lesser men.

Thus, during the '20s in Germany, a writer whom the critics were currently eulogizing was defended against charges of theft on the ground that he was a genius. His action, which was not disputed, was peculiarly treacherous. A friend had lent him his home, full of beautiful objects of art, and the writer, moving out, had denuded it, claiming the right to keep the loot because he "appreciated" it more than the owner did. The court hard-heartedly ordered him to return it, against the protests of admirers of the "genius."

* * *

I do not know whether Dr. Oppenheimer is a genius because I am not capable of judging the uniqueness of his contributions to thermonuclear physics. But I have heard his defenders argue: "Suppose he did act dishonestly and unwisely. He is a genius and indispensable."

This is a sentimental, non-logical inference. Dr. Allen Nunn May and Professor Pontecorvo, eminent atomic physicists, were traitors to their own oaths. One went to jail, the other fled behind the Iron Curtain.

* * *

A motto of the old aristocracy was "noblesse oblige"—nobility imposes obligations. One might argue that genius, or great talent, a gift of nature, relieves no one of his social duties but puts him under special obligations to society.

Intellectual talent combined with weak or bad character makes a brilliant man more dangerous to society than a dull man could ever be, for such are seldom entrusted with responsibility and power.

The adoration of intellect, alone, regardless of character, or of the more common forms of intelligence known as common sense, has created the current revulsion against the eggheads. All anti-intellectualism is dangerous. But Dr. Oppenheimer, however he deplores it, has contributed to it.

Britons Wide Awake

(From European Review, London)

PUBLIC opinion in Britain is at present totally unprepared for war, believing that there is no real danger of it at the moment. The great decisions of history — and a British decision to intervene in Indo-China might have proved to be one of them—are not often made, in a democracy, as a result of old loyalties, or because of taunts or accusations of weakness, or any other such superficial reasons. They result when the nation's deepest instincts of self-preservation rise up in the hearts of the people in a wave of determination, against which no government can stand, or armed with which no government can fall.

But it is only mortal fear or passionate conviction which can inspire a willingness to face martyrdom of the order of hydrogen warfare if it can be avoided, and at present the British are plainly not moved either by one or the other. If support had been given by the government to something approaching the alarming idea of a preventive war, it would have been done, as it were, while the people slept, without active appreciation of the risks involved; and the British are too great and too democratic a people to be led, sleeping, into a war which might mean their annihilation.

For the British an all-out hydrogen-plus-bacterial war at any time would be likely to spell such utter destruction that it is easy to imagine that real recovery would never again be achieved. It cannot be expected that they should rush blindly into such a risk, committed in advance to follow obediently the unpredictable path of American diplomacy.

Empress Hotel Approved

CAPTAIN Charles Kingsford-Smith had landed his plane Southern Cross at Croydon Airdrome after a record-breaking 12,000-mile run from Australia to Britain. With him were three crewmen.

The date was July 10, 1929—just 25 years ago.

Camillien Houde, mayor of Montreal and member of the Legislative Assembly for Montreal-St. Marie, had been unanimously elected chief of the Conservative party in Quebec by 1,000 delegates gathered in convention in Montreal.

President Herbert Hoover and Secretary of State Stimson were trying to talk western Republican senators out of the increased tariffs on Canadian cattle, butter and dairy products.

Britain's Labor government was walking a tight rope. On the first division, Liberals voted with the government to defeat the Conservatives. The government had a majority of 120.

British Columbia's government-sponsored tobacco growing industry had reached a stage when it should be able to carry on as a self-sustaining private enterprise, said Hon. W. Atkinson, minister of agriculture.

* * *

Victoria ratepayers had voted 1,206 to 46 to grant the Canadian Pacific Railway a stretch of mudflats, on which a great hotel would be built. They had given the go-ahead signal to the Empress Hotel, as it was later to be known. The date was July 7, 1904—50 years ago.

On that day, David Spencer's was offering 260 tweed and serge suits for men, formerly $10 each, reduced to $4.75 each.

Some other prices: Men's and ladies' boots, $1.90 a pair; belts, 25 cents each; children's dresses, $1 each. At Weiler's you could get a 99-piece glass and china dinner service, "including soup tureen," for $6.50. On the E & N Railway's "Suburban Train Service," the fare from Victoria to Shawnigan Lake and return was 50 cents.

The British Colonist continued its hot attacks on the colonial government's slowness and favoritism in granting lands to settlers. This was July, 1859—95 years ago.

In the days of the Hudson's Bay Company charter (revoked the previous May) the company had controlled land grants. The company had failed in its undertaking to bring in settlers. Instead, it had driven settlers away.

Since the company's rule officially ended, there had been little if any improvement, the Colonist said. Government officials were still the company's servants.

"We . . . expect a scheme to be initiated that will place the public domain where every man may claim a portion as a right, without being exposed to official supercilliousness, or soliciting it as a favor."

The Packsack

Of GREGORY CLARK

THE finest garden in our neighborhood has not many flowers in it. It would never take any prizes in a horticultural contest. Its charm lies in its quality of privacy. Sitting on one of the homely rustic benches down near the foot of it, you can hardly believe you are in the midst of a big, pulsing city.

The bushes that surround it are mostly flowering shrubbery such as orange blossom, lilac, honeysuckle and Japanese plum, which get their flowering over early in the season, and then devote themselves heartily to providing shade and a thick screen of foliage. My neighbor has taken graceful advantage of the situation, and has for years past maintained a number of benches and chairs scattered around the garden, mostly at the foot, where his friends are welcome to come and sit in cool and bowered isolation from the thronging community all around. Oh, he has a few flowers in their season: some tulips in early June, a cluster of zinnias here and there to spark up the shadows. But it has not been for flowers we have strolled to sit in this garden: it has been for the seclusion of it. Why, you don't even notice the sounds from the street, or from neighboring premises.

A few weeks ago, newcomers moved into the house next door west, and the first thing they did was clean up their garden. They happen to be flower lovers, and have no use for bushes. Underbrush, they call it. They cut down their shrubbery — orange blossom, lilac, all grown half wild in the years.

And my neighbor, the owner of the secluded garden, made the horrifying discovery that the bushes around his place were not on his property, but over the fence, on the neighbors'. A hasty investigation revealed that nearly all the shrubbery, on all three sides, was on neighbors' premises.

When a newcomer to a district starts tidying up his garden, it is astonishing how infectious a thing he has let loose. Last week, the neighbor south of my friend uprooted all his old shrubbery. And there is my friend's garden, now naked, bald, all its privacy vanished; nothing but an old back yard with some incongruous benches in it.

With the Classics

It is the hush of night, and all between
Thy margin and the mountains dusk, yet clear,
Mellow'd and mingling, yet distinctly seen,
Save darken'd Jura whose capt heights appear
Precipitously steep; and drawing near,
There breathes a living fragrance from the shore
Of flowers yet fresh with childhood; on the ear

Letters to the Editor

Bus Tariffs

This is a problem which might better be solved by co-operation from all interested and affected.

The six-day week seems to be favored by the public and some retailers. Large insurance companies (and others) in England even in early days realized that Saturday was the most convenient day for some to do business and accordingly gave their help either Saturday or Monday off, leaving an adequate staff [illegible] the workers as they still had their long week end.

Such a scheme should help to equalize bus traffic; now the buses run almost empty at times on Saturdays and Wednesdays. There would not be the crowding of stores on Saturdays as at present when workers were able to shop on other days, thus again making a more even passenger traffic for the buses.

Naturally such a scheme would take a great deal of working out, but if all firms cooperated even the government being approached to alternate Saturdays and Mondays as days off—things would fall into shape, and employees would enjoy their long week end. Even the schools might be able to work out a plan to fit in with the idea. The banks, too, should be approached.

Cheap shopping fares at certain times in the day might be a good idea too and would help pensioners and others on small incomes who generally have the leisure to travel during the less busy hours.

Long intervals between buses are a detriment to the transit companies and makes people look for lifts downtown or elsewhere instead of waiting up to half an hour for a bus. Not only do the buses frequently wait five minutes at certain stops but poke along at a few miles an hour when in motion and it takes sometimes half an hour to get to a destination of three or four miles.

Increased fares will simply have the effect of decreasing passenger patronage, unless they stay by a 10-cent fare for short trips.

People and Beaches

Your paper has continually been writing about the access to public beaches and the reporter does not seem to know both sides of the issue.

I have lived all of my life in Gordon Head, and have always used our "private" beach. Now there is a subdivision the public have access.

But the public who come so easily to a beach in their cars do not know how to behave there.

The beach, once beautifully clean is now scattered with paper and orange peels. People have built fires above high watermark, under overhanging trees, just leaving them to burn out. Now when a person sits on the beach they are covered with black charcoal.

Last year, when the public first had access, our dressing room was used as a lavatory, things left behind were taken, and the rafts were used and left unanchored to drift out with the tide. This year we haven't made the dressing room, or the rafts, which the children love.

A few days ago I found a sight that prompted this letter. A group of people had burnt a large fire above high watermark as usual, evidently had been drinking a lot and throwing beer bottles over a wide area. Glass was everywhere. With so many children around it will be a wonder if no one is cut. That sort of thing has never happened before.

I do agree that there should be a footpath to every beach but a road for cars brings people who do not appreciate a beach and only make use of it thoughtlessly.

Imported Plants

A short time ago I received advertising on "Lathrum mordeu pink." Then a few days later a letter appeared in this paper stating that "this plant could be purchased in Victoria for only 50 cents."

I wrote the nursery advertising and received a reply which would appear to substantiate the claims of your writer.

I've also noticed that "Dominion Seed House" (an old reliable firm) has the same plant at six or more 58 cents each prepaid.

Cruel Spectacle

Since the city of Victoria is once again to be host to a circus, I would like to add my support on behalf of the SPCA to Miss G. M. Webster, secretary of the Performing and Caged Animals' Protection League.

Those of us who have access to the mass of information that exists on the treatment of circus animals know full well the suffering these poor creatures undergo [illegible]

To the average adult the circus is poor entertainment, so in order to prosper, the circus promoter caters to the children, which he does successfully by exploiting their natural love of animals.

It is indeed unfortunate then that children should unknowingly be responsible for keeping alive, year after year, the cruel spectacle of performing animals, which is nothing more than a survival of the Middle Ages.

Were children to realize the suffering and privations their friends endure they would, I known, be the first to condemn the use of performing animals and then would the circus promoter be forced to use his imagination and substitute acts other than those which can only bring suffering and misery to dumb animals. A circus of this sort would meet with the full approval of all humane organizations.

I would urge your readers who do not wish to derive pleasure from the suffering of helpless animals who cannot speak for themselves, to raise their voices in protest and speak for them.

With the weight of public opinion behind us, the SPCA could demand laws for the protection of animals. Laws are made by the majority but we cannot enforce laws that do not exist.

Appeal to Motorists

May I on behalf of Mr. F. Brawn, president of the Saanich Recreation Council, and the executive and on behalf of all sixteen Saanich supervised playpark committees, make a special appeal to motorists driving in Saanich during the next six weeks to drive with care in playpark areas.

To the best of my knowledge all park areas are marked with "Slow" signs. But even if you don't see a sign and think you are near a park, please be cautious.

It is to the motorists' benefit that many children gather in one area rather than play in small groups on the streets.

So as not to cause confusion, I should say that most of these areas are year around "slow" areas but our chief concern now is the next six weeks when so many four-year-olds and up will be attending supervised play.

Banff Club

As an ex-resident of Banff I would be very interested in getting former Banffites together by forming some sort of an association or club for that purpose.

There are many former residents of the mountain resort living now in Victoria, and elsewhere on the Island.

I would, therefore crave space [illegible] in the hope that sufficient response would be forthcoming to justify the forming of such an organization; that is, if there is not one in existence already.

Mental Hygiene

I was interested to read of the opening of the additional psychiatric ward at the Jubilee, and that Dr. Alcorn is head of the department of psychiatry and Dr. Pete is head of the department of neurology.

Dr. Pete has, so I believe, in addition to his medical degree also his specialist qualifications in both psychiatry and neurology.

As the founder of the American Mental Hygiene Movement, Clifford Beers, so aptly expressed it in his classic "The Mind that Found Itself": "No building ever cured a mental patient. People can be cured in tents, or in their homes, if only those who minister to them are properly trained." And one may perhaps add rightfully inspired!

We Victorians are fortunate in having a progressive Jubilee Hospital and even more in having its well trained and highly qualified staff, and we have another aid to mental hygiene and the maintaining of a well balanced mind, in our well stocked and impartial public library, where at the information desk there is always a qualified librarian, most amiably willing to help one to locate informative books.

Incompatible

Two items in Thursday's Colonist seem rather incompatible. The heading of one reads "Bid for Bus Fare Boost Reaches Council Today," of the other, "BCER Executives Make $875,000 on Bonus Options."

It will take the proposed increase on over 29,000,000 fares to pay this bonus alone.

A few years ago patrons were asked to buy weekly passes both for their own convenience and to save time for the company. The people were promised the privilege of buying passes when they voted to give the BCER the bus franchise. Now it is proposed to abolish passes for paying patrons, but no suggestion is made that free passes for employees and others will be discontinued.

With free passes and many other fringe benefits for employees, and bonus options for directors and officials, the argument that private enterprise is more efficient and can provide cheaper services than can a public utility loses its force.

Although I am opposed to socialism, if we must have monopolies, I prefer that they be public utilities.

Homemade Bread

Owing to this bakery dispute I hear that some women are contemplating making their own bread, which is a splendid idea. There is no reason today why they can't with all the appliances they have at their disposal.

To my mind it should be chief part of their education, especially a married woman. They may be specialists in typewriting or shorthand, etc., but unless they can cook they are not educated in the true sense of the word. Cooking, to my thinking, is essentially the chief part of a woman's education or should be a fundamental principle.

If you wish further information on this subject, I will be pleased to give it. We bake our own bread here.

A PADRE IN PRINT

BY REV. WILLIAM HILLS

Methinks the writer of Ecclesiastes has a point when he says "of making many books there is no end; and much reading is a weariness to the flesh.

My heart hasn't carried me through half-a-hundred years as yet, but I don't think I can remember a time when the bookshops were so full of books.

A couple of years ago, I chanced to win a competition, on a radio program, which brought into my study a year's subscription to the monthly selection of a well-known book club.

No sooner, it seemed, did I get my nose into one volume but that the postman popped another into the mail box.

I never did catch up—even when the subscription ran out.

There is a real reason for that, however.

The result is that I am slightly embarrassed to see some of these literary masterpieces on my shelves.

As a matter of record, I rejoice whenever the good ladies of the congregation have a garden party or a bazaar, for that provides me with an opportunity to get rid of them—the books, of course!—but they would be expensive at any price.

From time to time, humble folk are reminded that reading is a dangerous occupation.

One great historic Christian church still maintains an index of prohibited books, for instance, and requires its faithful to read only those which have "Nihil Obstat" stamped on the frontispiece.

Yes, reading is a dangerous occupation for those who have developed no critical faculty for assessing what they read.

★ ★ ★

The remarkable thing about this point of view is, of course, that it is as old as the first manuscript which man ever contrived to write.

One of the great divides in the cultural panorama of mankind occurred when man relied more upon his eyes than upon his memory.

Plato suggested that the invention of writing was not such a good thing for the world. Books made people make less use of their memories and their minds.

He argued that people read much and learn nothing; that they appear to know much and really know little; that they seem wise without being wise.

Perhaps we do really suffer from that condition in our generation.

Do we read too much too fast? Do we take time to think about what we have read?

There is an old Anglican collect which, referring to the scriptures—prays that "we may in such wise hear them, read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest them."

May not much of the ideological "sturm und drang" of the modern world be attributed to the undigested lumps of reading which, for the lack of critical purgation, have lodged in the recesses of the mind?

It is a solemn thought and one which calls for abiding reflection.

Inflation Hits Natives

Price Controls On Brides Asked

NEW YORK (NANA)—The natives of New Guinea are demanding price control on the two commodities hit by runaway inflation—brides and food.

A dispatch from Port Moresby to Pacific Islands Monthly, published in Sydney, reports that a meeting of village elders in the southeast New Guinea territory called on the British authorities to fix an $840 ceiling on brides, with a sliding scale down to $280. The money is customarily paid to the woman's relatives when her marriage has been arranged.

The tribal conference also voted to ask for controls on all native food sold in the Port Moresby area.

Battery Hails Training Plan

DUNCAN — The local 198 Light Anti-Aircraft Battery will welcome the change to train with regular force units, Major E. A. B. Sutton, officer commanding, lauded the scheme as "a sound idea."

Major Sutton said his experience has been that it is impossible to give proper training in the field use of guns and equipment without enough men to carry out tactical exercises, and this will be overcome by joining with the regular forces.

The Local battery will train in Victoria August 9 to 15.

Old-Time Coast Klondiker Jabez Saint Dies at 82

Jabez Saint, Sourdough, barge pilot, contractor, and seed merchant was a friend of poet Robert Service and Sam McGee.

He met McGee at the turn of the century while piloting barges through Miles Canyon and the Whitehorse Rapids.

Gold first lured Mr. Saint to the Yukon in 1897. He tramped across the Chilkoot Trail and White Pass with the first of the Sourdoughs.

Three years later he built a still-standing log cabin at Whitehorse for his bride Annie Anderson of Vancouver. Three of their five children were born there.

Back in Vancouver in 1910 he started a contracting business and six years later established the Western Seed Company.

The pair have been identified as John C. Macdonald and a companion known only as McLuckie.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Price-setting by governments or manufacturers is a "long step towards an authoritative system," an economics professor told the restrictive trade practices commission here.

Dr. Vernon A. Mund, of the University of Washington, testified at the invitation of the commission which is examining the effect on business of the Canadian law barring price-setting by manufacturers.

The three-man group is also investigating "loss-leadering"—the sale of goods at less than cost.

Dr. Mund said a merchant should be free to sell at whatever price he wants to above cost. He defined a loss-leader as anything sold at less than acquisition or laid-down cost.

Hitch-Hiking Dangers Not Worth Risking

Hitch-hiking may be a fairly uncommon practice in Victoria and on Vancouver Island, but it can be fatal anywhere.

Safety officials yesterday issued their annual warning against hitch-hiking, a warning issued at the start of each summer travel season, when the practice booms.

They covered the merits and demerits of hitch-hiking in many words which can be abridged in the single warning "Don't!"

MANY DEMERITS

The only merit is a speedy journey for a short time, while the demerit list is a long one.

Travel by thumb is slow in the long run; at least half of the hitch-hikers don't walk on the right side of the road; drivers can't see many hitch-hikers at night; motorists could be robbed by thumbers; and car insurance generally does not cover hitch-hikers in case of accidents.

Sixty per cent of hitch-hikers are adults, but only a few travel that way all the time. Most are impatient over waiting for a bus.

FEW IN VICTORIA

Victoria's hitch-hikers are few in number and are seldom involved in accidents. Elsewhere on Vancouver Island, there have been several fatalities among hitch-hikers in recent years, all among single men.

These men find cars won't stop and become angry, moving closer to the centre of the road until they are hit.

But hitch-hiking remains a person's own business, even though it may be the last business they conduct.

THE ICE CREAM CONE, SO FAMILIAR TO-DAY WAS ORIGINATED FIFTY YEARS AGO AT THE LOUISIANIA PURCHASE EXPOSITION IN ST. LOUIS. A MAN BY THE NAME OF ERNEST A HAMWI, A RECENT ARRIVAL FROM SYRIA WAS OPERATING HIS PASTRY BOOTH AT THE FAIR WHEN A NEARBY ICE CREAM PARLOR RAN OUT OF DISHES USED FOR FIVE AND TEN CENT SERVINGS. MR. HAMWI CAME TO THE RESCUE WITH A CRISP WAFER-LIKE PASTRY WHICH HE ROLLED INTO A CONE AND SUPPLIED TO THE ICE CREAM CONCESSION. SOON THE DISHES WERE SET ASIDE AS THE ACCEPTANCE OF ICE CREAM IN CONES MET WITH IMMEDIATE APPROVAL. THEY WERE KNOWN AS THE WORLD'S FAIR CORNUCOPIA AND IT WAS NOT UNTIL 1910 THAT THEY ADOPTED THE NAME NOW IN USE — THE ICE CREAM CONE.

Project Near Duncan Launched Four Years Ago

BY STAN CUMMER

DUNCAN—Forty-seven gallons of milk a day is building a one-family co-operative dairy enterprise near Duncan which will eventually provide six dairy farms and comfortable livings for that many families and more.

The first step was taken four years ago when Nick Groenwold immigrated to Cowichan Station, near Duncan, from his native Holland. The first of the six dairy farms was taken over by the family on January 1 of this year.

Between the first step in 1950 and the day when Nick and his brothers, Peter and Hank, who followed him from Holland, took over the 69-acre dairy farm on Bench Road, formerly owned by Grant Loveseth, there lies four years of hard work and saving by Nick and Peter, and two years of toil and saving by Hank, who came to Cowichan in 1952. Peter, second one in this country, came out in 1950 shortly after Nick.

DEGREE OF LUCK

Along with the hard work there must also be reckoned a certain degree of luck, for Nick confesses that it was just a lucky chance that brought him to British Columbia and Vancouver Island. The same lucky chance saved Nick from going into the Dutch army for a two-year hitch, just at the time when his application was in to come to Canada.

Nick had taken his medical examination for compulsory service, after he had made application to come to Canada, and it was a toss-up whether he would get a boat to Canada before his turn came to report for service.

When another family that was scheduled to catch an early boat failed to make it, Nick was put ahead, and instead of going to an Alberta farm, as had been intended, he was sent to a farm at Cowichan Station.

FAMILY TOGETHER

Now the whole family is together here and they are thankful that they have located in Cowichan. The climate here, they say, is close to duplicating their own Holland weather, except that here it is better. Here the summers are a little warmer and the winters not quite so cold.

For Nick the chance to come to Canada ahead of going into the army was not a complete escape from the obligation for service. He has been told by the Dutch consul that he will be required to enlist in the Canadian Army if his service is ever required.

It was not long after the three boys—Nick, Peter and Hank—took over the farm before the rest of the large family was on the way here from Holland. Ten of them left Amsterdam on January 12 and arrived here on January 17, after five days of air travel from Holland.

On the farm today there are Jaelmar, their father, and Jaapje, mother; Anne, 24; Jaelmar, 18, a farm hand on a Cowichan Station farm and a dairy worker on the home farm after his day's work is done; Ben, a logger at Honeymoon Bay, also a dairy worker in the evenings; Trinny, 14; Alice, 12; Harry, 10; and Frank, 8. Mary, a domestic, is employed in Duncan.

Also in the Cowichan district, married and living in Duncan, are two other girls, Lenny and Jo, who were both married in Holland in 1953 and who came with their husbands to Duncan. Still another brother is a farmer in California.

Handsome Jersey cow in foreground makes fitting symbol for the success of the large and industrious Groenwold family which has parlayed hard work, thrift and good luck into the beginning of a prosperous Cowichan dairy industry in the brief time since arriving in Canada from Holland. Seated in front of the family is Mrs. Jaapje Groenwold holding her year-old grandson, Dick. Beside her is her youngest son, Frank, eight. Front row, from left: Ben, Harry Harmdirk, Anne, Hank, Jenny Harmdirk, Jaelmar, Sr., Jaelmar, Jr.; Jean and her husband, Peter Groenwold. Back row: Nick, Mary, Everett and Jo Boer, Trinny, Alice and Harry. Jean, Harry Harmdirk and Everett Boer are in-laws. One brother is in California.

Well Fitted for Task

The Groenwolds are well fitted for the dairy business. Jaelmar, father, was for 32 years employed in a creamery in Holland. He was a cream tester in one of the largest creameries in Europe, according to the boys, at Bedum, Holland. Nick was for five years employed on a dairy farm in Holland, and Peter was a worker in a creamery, known as a dairy factory in Holland.

Hank, third of the boys to come to Canada, was a farm hand in Holland. But despite all their industry, and all their training, and all their desire, the family says they could never have owned their own dairy farms in Holland. They had to emigrate to be able to do this and their government, knowing this, gave them every assistance, providing their passage and making all arrangements for them—not only for the three pioneers who traveled by boat—but for the ten others who came by air.

MUCH HARD WORK

Just as an example of some of the hard work that lies behind them—as well as plenty of it facing them—Nick came to a Cowichan Station farm. After four months of this work he got a job as a carpenter in Duncan, although he had never done this work before. But he was good at it, so good that he was offered an apprenticeship.

The apprenticeship offer was turned down. Part of the bargain would have been a four-year term with Nick bound out to a contractor. Nick says that this is just what they left Holland to get away from—working always for someone else. "I couldn't see myself signing away my freedom for four years," said Nick. "I want to be my own man—not belong to someone else."

RENTED BOATS

After Nick left carpentering he worked at Genoa Bay for a short time, renting boats, and then went to the Chemainus mill of MacMillan and Bloedel, where he is still employed during the day, working on the dairy farm after hours at the mill.

Peter, who followed Nick to Canada a short time later, is also employed at the Chemainus mill and works on the home farm. Hank was employed first at the farm of the Sisters of St. Ann, and is now also employed at the Chemainus mill.

Deal Closed for $25,000

When the three boys took over the farm of Grant Loveseth on January 1 of this year they made a down payment of $2,500 for the $25,000 dairy plant—$15,000 for the dairy herd of 17 cows and the machinery, and $10,000 for the farm and the house.

It will not long before the home farm is paid for and they start acquiring their second farm, because they are paying off the indebtedness at the rate of nearly a thousand dollars a month. From the herd of 17 dairy cows, and the 47 gallons of milk a day, they receive a milk cheque of between $800 and $900. To this they add another $150 from the earnings of the millworkers.

In the dairy herd are 13 Jerseys and four Holsteins, and now there are three calves. All of the animals are bred by artificial insemination, and they rank high in dairy herds of the Cowichan district.

HELD IN SIX SHARES

The home farm will always be the home of the father and mother and one of the older boys—at present Peter, who is married and lives with his wife in a cottage on the property. But for the time being, until its purchase is complete, the farm is held in six shares, one each for the five older boys, Nick, Peter, Hank, Ben and Jaelmar junior, and half a share each for the two youngest sons, Harry and Hank, 12 and 8.

Don't think that the girls are being left out, just because they will not be given farms of their own. Anne, 24, now at home, will be married this year, as soon as her fiance comes out from Holland. Mary, the domestic, will stay at that work in Duncan, and Trinny, 14, and Alice, 12, are still busy with their schooling but they also do their share on the farm, watering the calves, helping with household chores, and even learning to run the farm tractor.

STRIVE FOR GOAL

While there is a lot of work and a large share of luck in the fortunes of the Groenwolds, there is no element of chance. They have set a goal and they are prepared to strive with all they have, every one of them, until that goal is reached.

They are all agreed on one thing, that the goal is very much worth while. With their energy and determination, with their teamwork and co-operation, there is no doubt whatever about their achieving their goal, and they will make Canada a better place by doing so.

With all that they have achieved, and their future pattern laid out for them, they have one wish, and that is that many more Dutch families at home could learn what they have learned about British Columbia and Vancouver Island.

WEST OVERLOOKED

Nick says that most of the talk in Holland about Canada concerns Ontario and the prairies, and he hopes that the story of their success and their happiness in their new country becomes widely known among Dutch families at home. They themselves are certain to become widely known among the people with whom they have chosen to make their future life, for they are solid, substantial and very desirable New Canadians.

As Result of Logging Truck Mishap

Five Residents of Nanaimo District Awarded Damages of Almost $69,000

NANAIMO—Five district residents were awarded damages amounting to almost $69,000 in a judgment handed down in Supreme Court Friday by Mr. Justice J. M. Coady.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sheldrake, Mr. and Mrs. Norman White and Frank McLaughlin, four of whom were severely injured as a result of an accident at Parksville on March 18, 1952, were given judgment against Allan Greenard of Coombs.

Greenard was driver of a heavily-loaded logging truck which ran out of control after its brakes failed and crashed into a building at the intersection of the Island Highway and the Alberni Road.

The building was so badly wrecked that it had to be torn down. Mr. White, the owner, received special damages of $9,012 for loss of the building.

Mrs. White, proprietor of a dress shop in the building and Mr. Sheldrake, owner of a jewelry store located in the same structure, his wife and Mr. McLaughlin, a customer, also received damages for injuries sustained.

Largest award was made to Mr. Sheldrake who suffered permanent disabilities. He received general damages of $30,000 plus special damages of $7,044.

AWARDED $13,000

Mrs. Sheldrake was awarded $13,000 for her injuries, which were also severe while Mr. McLaughlin's damages were fixed at $15,000 plus $1,827.25 special damages.

Counsel appearing in the case were E. D. Strongitharm for Mr. and Mrs. Sheldrake, C. Murray Reynolds for Mr. and Mrs. White and R. F. Macisaac for Frank McLaughlin.

F. J. Gilmour represented the defendant.

Ratepayers Meet

Albernis Seek Senior Matric

PORT ALBERNI—Action to promote interest throughout the district in inauguration of senior matriculation classes at Alberni District High School was planned at the regular meeting of Beaver Creek Ratepayers' Association.

Lists were ordered placed in various stores for signature of parents whose children would take Grade 13 courses locally if they were available.

A second letter to the Nanaimo office of the B.C. Telephone Company was authorized urging extension of the service in the Beaver Creek area. At the same time a request was made to residents of the district beyond the present telephone line to check their applications at the local office.

During discussion it was estimated that between thirty and fifty applications had been made for the extension of the line, presently reaching some six and one half miles north of Alberni.

The secretary was directed to write to the Department of Public Works, Victoria, asking that a road some six hundred yards in length be opened up to connect Swanson and Flyetti Roads.

Legislation will be sought by the Association to control bicycle traffic on rural roads.

Cowichan Talent Packs Them In

DUNCAN—The standing room only sign was out Friday night when the second annual amateur talent show and concert was staged in the Cowichan Arena. The show was interspersed with professional vaudeville acts and proved one of the best evenings of entertainment for a long time.

Amateur talent was divided into three age groups, 12 and under, 13 to 18, and over 18.

In the first group, Don Oliver, who sang a western song and accompanied himself on the guitar, was the winner. Second and third were David Waldie, piano, and Pamela Smith, vocal.

—An acrobatic dance by Gilian Bede Robins took first place in the large second group, with Freddy Duncan, vocal, winner last year, coming a very close second. Other acts in this age group were Clare Chapman, vocal; Jackie Ogilvie, hula hula dancer; Phyllis Gail, vocal, and Al Donohue, vocal.

It took three elimination rounds of applause by the capacity audience to decide the winner of the third group, with three of the four acts in the running. Dorothy Cook and Allan Vance, duet, won out over a string quartet and a square dance group for first place.

Week-Long Foray

Unconquered Summit Lures Island Climbers

A party of mountain climbers will start a week-long trip August 21 in an attempt to scale Mt. General Foster, an unconquered 7,000-foot peak in Strathcona Park of Vancouver Island.

Previous attempts at climbing the mountain have all failed due to terrain and lack of supplies.

Heading the party of experienced alpinists will be A. W. Lash, president of the Victoria Alpine Club, Major E. R. Gibson, Noel Lax and S. Watson, of Duncan.

The earth is about 3,000,000 miles nearer the sun in January than in July.

Experts See Cobble Hill Oil Sands

DUNCAN — Two geologists who have been making explorations in the Cobble Hill Sutton Range district have reported that the same oil-bearing sands found in Alberta fields have been located here, George E. Bonner, Cobble Hill, says.

The two geologists who would not allow their names to be used, reported finding oil-bearing sands in the Sutton Line area which extends from the Malahat north, according to Mr. Bonner.

The oil-bearing sands are said to run to Texada Island and then to the Mainland and they have been traced from there back to the large Alberta fields, he said. There have been many blind spots encountered but the main stream of oil has always been relocated, according to Mr. Bonner's information.

Mr. Bonner himself has seen a number of evidences of oil in this same area and as long ago as 1932 he says that he found an oil-sand area along the Koksilah River which had been exposed through a landslide.

"The sand extended 14 to 16 feet deep and 200 to 300 yards long. I sent samples to Shawinigan Falls, Ontario, Chemical Laboratories and they confirmed that the sand was heavily impregnated with oil. As an experiment I put a tobacco can of the sand through a retort and the oil extracted burned for two hours."

Stocks of Bread Run Low Up-Island

PORT ALBERNI—Local bakeshops have increased production of bread to capacity but have been unable to take up the slack.

Some of the Alberni district stores have been without bread since Friday morning as householders on the bakeries' delivery routes stocked up.

A large Port Alberni department store with its own bakery is reported to be carrying on at the usual rate of production.

Two operators of bakeshops in Port Alberni say they are making every effort to help the stores meet demands but will employ no extra help.

Sales of flour and yeast are booming in central Vancouver Island as housewives begin to feel the pinch caused by cutting off of the greatest part of the city's bread supply by closing of union bakeries in Vancouver and Nanaimo.

In Nanaimo, restaurants are still serving rolls and sandwiches. One at least managed to maintain a store of fresh bread by keeping unused loaves frozen. Grocery store shelves were swept clean shortly after morning deliveries. An unofficial rationing system has been introduced by some stores to take care of regular customers.

TV NOTEBOOK

by Tommy Tomlinson

A gadget almost as popular with some television stars as a sponsor, is known as a teleprompter. Although the viewing public isn't generally aware of the existence of this little box, several stars such as Arthur Godfrey and Red Skelton rely on it to keep from muffing lines.

The teleprompter looks much like a music stand and carries the script, or portions of it, in letters more than an inch high on a continuously rolling band. With an operator trained to keep pace with the dialogue as it unfolds before the cameras, actors can pretty much do away with mental lapses which have caused futile floundering on occasion. Actually, some dramatic shows use four of these machines so that an actor can see one from any position. Dragnet, which is generally accepted to be a first-rate production, carries the entire script on teleprompter machines.

If you think that this sounds like a handy gadget to have around when junior is called on to recite, you're right. The public speaking field, as well as TV, goes for it in a big way.

And, by the way, you'll go in an even bigger way for the sharp, clear picture of the new MARCONI television line. Here at DELTA ELECTRIC, 714 Cormorant St., we will be happy to demonstrate the qualities of this fine product. Drop in today and look 'em over.

Built Too High, Log Load Proves Much Too Heavy

The problem of a log load too high to go through the Four-Mile Hill railway underpass had repercussions in Colwood court yesterday.

For an overweight load last Thursday, Highway Sawmills, Ltd., was fined $10 and costs.

Court was told that when the load would not tuck under the railway bridge he was forced to back his truck up the Four Mile Hill.

RCMP then had the truck pulled on to weigh scales and laid a charge involving an overweight load. The fine yesterday was $35 and costs.

Police said the overload was 45,000 pounds on an allowable 51,800 pounds.

In the same court two Victorians were fined. Victor W. Bond paid $10 and costs on a charge of passing a vehicle on a solid line, and Victor Ramsdale paid $35 and $5.50 costs on a careless driving charge. Ramsdale drove off Sooke Road, police said.

Ronald F. McLaren was fined $10 and costs for failing to stop at a traffic control sign.

Allen F. Ford, Metchosin, was fined $15 and costs on a careless driving charge when he appeared in Sooke police court yesterday.

Thrills of Big Top Here This Week

BY IAN MACDONALD

All the thrills of the big top come to Victoria this week with Clyde Beatty's world-famous circus, which will give two performances each day, Wednesday and Thursday.

CLYDE BEATTY

Victorians have missed all the familiar sights, sounds and excitement of circus entertainment since Beatty last visited here in 1952.

Small boys by the hundreds, and many not so small, will be on hand at Victoria West Park early Wednesday morning — when the circus comes rumbling into town — to watch in wonder as the big tent goes up.

Making the trip to Vancouver Island takes on the form of a miniature "D-Day" for the 400 performers, plus many technicians and roustabouts, and the hundreds of animals that travel with one of the last two train circuses remaining on the North American continent.

The circus will sail out of Vancouver Sunday by barge for Ladysmith. Its first performance will be Monday at Port Alberni, and Courtenay will be visited Tuesday before the train heads for Victoria.

Duncan will be played Friday and the circus will entertain at Nanaimo Saturday before sailing back to the Mainland.

Beatty, one of the world's greatest animal trainers, will be seen in action with 28 lions and tigers. He has just completed a movie, "Ring of Fear" which will be released in two weeks, and is frequently seen on TV.

His visit may also bring Mickey Spillane to Victoria. The popular "who-done-it" author appeared with Beatty in the movie and took to circus life. He intends to take in part of the tour, and may arrive while the three-ring entertainers are in the city.

Victorian Monica Dudley writes from Penticton stating that the Lancaster Company is going over well at the Okanagan Lake beauty spot with its "Theatre by Starlight" summer stock.

The group first performed in Victoria in 1953, and contains many stage personalities well-known locally. Included with Miss Dudley are Patricia Leith, Jack Ammon, Wally Marsh, director Ian Thorne and producer James Testemale.

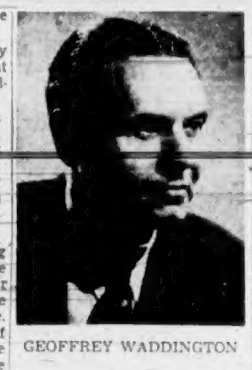
Three of the best plays from the recent local school drama festival will be presented Monday at 8.15 p.m. at Victoria High School.

Oak Bay High will open the program with "The Case of the Weird Sister." Carole McClellan, winner of the festival scholarship, will return from the UBC drama course to take the lead.

"Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp" will be presented by pupils of S. J. Willis Junior High, and will feature colorful Oriental costuming and fairy-tale settings.

A Mexican village is the scene for "The Red Velvet Goat" to be performed by Belmont High pupils.



GEOFFREY WADDINGTON

Music between the plays will be provided by S. J. Willis band.

Popular with the 1,800 teachers attending the summer school of education are the morning concerts and lectures at 11 a.m. in Victoria High auditorium.

While intended primarily for those attending the course, there is limited admission to the public at a cost of 50 cents.

This week S. J. Willis Junior High band will be featured Monday. Frank Kugelberg will present a motion picture-lecture Tuesday on "Tahiti and the South Seas."

A lieder recital will be given Wednesday by contralto Marie Bodker, accompanied by L. Shepherd-Munn. American danseuse Mary Tiffany will perform Thursday.

Canadian artist Emily Carr will be the subject of a talk Friday by Professor Edna Baxter.

Sir Gordon Richards, famous British jockey, has a role in the new J. Arthur Rank movie "The Rainbow Jacket." In the racing-drama story he had to do something that doesn't happen often—lose a race. Also in the picture is Robert Morley.

"The Billboard", American's amusement industry magazine, reports that in the U.S. last year $200 million was spent on food and drink at outdoor amusement attractions in a year. Now if the amount of hot dogs consumed were laid end to end . . .

The 17th annual Victoria Highland Games will be held next Saturday at Royal Athletic Park and a record entry appears likely.

Pipers and dancers are entered from points as far apart as San Francisco and Edmonton. Two pipe bands from Seattle will appear along with Victoria and Mainland military and civilian aggregations.

Traditional caber-tossing will be included in the athletic events.

Victorians wanting to break into television and radio will have their big chance Friday, when the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's musical director, Geoffrey Waddington, and television producer Drew Crossan will audition at CJVI's studio.

Applications for auditions should be sent to Mrs. Latsie McCullough, CBC, 701 Hornby Street, Vancouver. Applicants should be over 16.

Local adjudicators will be Audrey St. D. Johnson and Charles Palmer.

Hans Gruber will again conduct Victoria Symphony Orchestra this Thursday in the second of a series of four concerts being held this month at Butchart Gardens. About 2,000 people listened last week to the opening performance.

Jerry Gosley and his "Smiles" show have decided to postpone a long-awaited CBC audition rather than disappoint RCAF men at three isolated bases up-Island and the citizens of Port Hardy.

JERRY GOSLEY

The troupe flies from Pat Bay Friday night, and will give four performances before returning Sunday.

They hope, however, to be seen by the broadcasting bigwigs at a show they will give soon at the Veterans' Hospital in Vancouver.

Going up-Island with the show this week end are Irene Henderson, Al Denoni, Brenda Myron, Andy Anderson, George Porter, Mimi Bavin and Jerry Gosley. Two other performers will also make the trip.

Music in Beacon Hill Park this Wednesday at 8 p.m. will be presented by the B.C. Electric band.

DYE FRAMES

Here's an idea you might save for future use: If you tire of your clear plastic frames, next year you might tint them in a pastel that combines with your evening wardrobe. Use a double-strength solution of all-purpose dye in warm water. Swish the glasses around in it gently till the desired color is obtained, then dip in cold water and pat dry with a clean cloth. This will not affect the lenses in any way.

HAWAIIAN CHICKEN

Chicken a la Hawaiian is "party perfect" but treat the family to it, too. It's easy! Cook 1 cup crushed drained pineapple (use cubes if you like) in 3 tablespoons butter or margarine. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour. Slowly stir in 1½ cups water. Add ¼ cup each of diced celery and diced green pepper, 1 cup (more if you like) diced cooked chicken and 2 teaspoons soy sauce. Cook 10 minutes. Add water if you want a thinner mixture. Serve over hot fluffy cooked white rice.

Officers Fashion Popularity Yardstick

Guards, Dragoons Lead Badge Choice

OTTAWA (CP)—On the surface at least, it appears the Canadian Guards are the most popular of the six infantry regiments in the army. And the Royal Canadian Dragoons the more popular of the two armored regiments.

This is how the popularity yardstick was fashioned:

When the Canadian army regular force was formed in October, 1946, a number of officers of the Royal Canadian Armored Corps and Royal Canadian Infantry Corps were taken on strength. During the Second World War, these officers had served in various units not now included in the active force.

When they took up staff appointments or specialist duties in the post-war army, they continued to wear the badges and uniforms of the units with which they had been associated during the war.

In February, the army directed that all regular force officers must wear the badges and uniforms of active force regiments or corps. Forty-four armored corps and 142 infantry corps officers were affected.

These 186 officers were asked to state a preference for a regiment, listing their first three choices. Though remaining in their present staff posts, they would wear the insignia of the regiment to which they were assigned and, in normal circumstances, continue their connection with that regiment throughout their service careers.

The army didn't promise that each officer would be assigned to the regiment of his choice, but it said it would do its best.

The assignments now have been completed, the army said Saturday. This is how they went:

Of the 44 armored corps officers, 28 have been assigned to the Royal Canadian Dragoons and 16 to Lord Strathcona's Horse.

Of the 142 infantry officers, 61 have been assigned to the Canadian Guards; 34 to the Black Watch; 26 to the Queen's Own Rifles; nine to the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry; nine to the Royal Canadian Regiment, and three to the Royal 22nd Regiment.

Among those assigned to the PPCLI is Lieut.-Col. Jack Mahony, VC, 42, of New Westminster, B.C., liaison officer to the U.S. department of the army in Washington. When he won the Victoria Cross at the battle of the Melfa River in Italy in 1944, he was leading the Westminster Regiment.

Have you figured lately how much you're worth?

(It's probably more than you think!)

Nearly everything you own is worth much more today than it was ten, or even five years ago.

Real estate values, for example, have skyrocketed. Most stocks are substantially higher. Add everything up and you may be pleasantly surprised at how much you're "worth" today.

That total is your "estate." You have built it carefully—as a measure of security for your family, now and in the future.

Naming National Trust as your Executor is the positive way of making sure your estate does serve the purpose you've had in mind while building it.

Discuss this with one of our Trust Officers. An appointment will be made to your convenience and you will be under no obligation whatever.

Visitors, Victoria Divide Honors In Summer 'Spiel

BY JIM TANG

Victoria and visiting rinks divided honors just about as evenly as possible in the Victoria Curling Club's first annual summen bonspiel, which came to a close early last night.

When results had been tabulated it was found that visiting rinks had won eight of the 16 merchandise prizes at stake. Victoria rinks had whatever edge there was in winning the No. 1 and No. 2 events and the Grand Aggregate. Visiting rinks won the No. 3 and No. 4 events.

Dr. Kirby Moysey's Victoria rink was the only double winner although four rinks each won two merchandise prizes. Moysey won the No. 1 event and the Grand Aggregate.

IN TWO FINALS

Winner of the No. 2 event was Jack Finlan's Victoria rink, skipped for all but two games by Bill Padavell, veteran Edmonton curler. Tony Folk of Duncan won the No. 3 event and Hillard Miller of Leader, Sask., won from Folk in the final of No. 4. Folk was the only rink to contest two finals.

Moysey, who won seven of eight games, two by default, on his way to the Grand Aggregate, had the easiest final of all as he trimmed George Walkey of Victoria. Moysey scored four in the fourth and four in the sixth to take a 10-2 lead and Walkey conceded after the 11th end.

Walkey won his way to the final by upsetting Calgary's R. Patriquin, 9-7, in a morning semi-final. Patriquin also lost a semi-final in the No. 4 event in the morning, going down to Miller, 9-7, but took home the prize for a third place in No. 3 and a fourth place in No. 4.

Finlan's rink got quite a tussel from Tony Gutoski and his three Victoria "teenagers. Gutoski's youngsters pulled away in the early part of the game to lead, 5-2, after six ends. But Finlan came back with two in the sixth and seventh ends to tie and two in the ninth to take a 7-6 lead.

Gutoski squared the game in in the 10th end and Finlan took an 8-7 lead in the 11th. The last end was one of the most interesting of the bonspiel as Padavell successfully guarded shot rock right from the third rock thrown, laying four excellent guards in the process as Gutoski came close several times to changing the complexion of the game.

Fourteen-year-old Dale Dalziel threw lead rocks for Gutoski while Gary Leibel and Lyle Garraway, second and third, respectively, are but 15.

WIDE OPEN

Folk reached the final of No. 3 in one of the morning's three semi-finals by defeating Victoria's H. Croll. A seven-ender on fourth end broke the game wide open.

Giles, however, gave Folk quite a tussle in the final. The Duncan rink scored three in the first and one in the second end and after Giles came back with two in the third, the next two ends were blanked.

Turning point came in the ninth end with Folk leading 7-4. After six rocks, Giles had three in the house. A rather lucky fourth rock cleaned the house for Folk and he went on to score two.

But Folk couldn't quite make it in the see-saw final with Miller in No. 4. Miller counted two in the 10th end to take a 7-6 lead, but Folk came back with two in the 11th to start home with an 8-7 bulge.

EXTRA END

Miller came through on his last shot in the 12th end to take out Folk's shot rock and stick for one, forcing an extra end.

With one rock left for each rink, there didn't seem to be much hope for Miller. Folk had three rocks, including first and second shot, at the back of the house while Miller had third rock in the 12-foot ring on the left and a biter behind Folk's three. Miller drew almost perfectly to Folk's shot rock and the Duncan skip's last rock, a shade heavy, practically cleaned out the nest at the back and left Miller counting one with the rock in the outer ring on the side.

Prize winners in addition to the ones already mentioned were: Walkey, second prize in No. 1 event; Gutoski, second prize in No. 2 event; Giles, second prize in No. 3 event; Folk, second prize in No. 4 event as well as first in No. 3; Miller, third prize in No. 1 as well as first in No. 4; Charlie Watson, Victoria, third prize in No. 2 event; Croll, third prize in No. 3 and fourth prize in No. 4; Patriquin, third prize in No. 4 and fourth prize in No. 1; H. Day, Victoria, fourth prize in No. 2; Walter Schneider, Neville, Sask., fourth prize in No. 3.

IT BEATS ME

By Jim Tang

Yesterday's mail brought the week's most pleasant surprise, and set history of a sort because it was a "first."

Before opening one of the letters I noticed the name of the sender on the back of the envelope—Frank King, Departure Bay.

"Oh, oh," I thought to myself, remembering that special mention had been made of the Nanaimo defenseman for some questionable language during last Wednesday's Inter-City Lacrosse game here and expecting the contents to be exactly the opposite of what they were.

"In a recent lacrosse game between Nanaimo and Victoria, I used bad judgment and also bad language. I would like to apologize. It was on the spur of the moment and I assure you it won't happen again . . ."

That's the first time in more than 10 years in this office that any player, or sports official, for that matter, has reacted in this manner to the printing of facts they did not like and it capped what has been a most fortunate 24 hours for me.

King made the excellent suggestion in his letter that there should be a bench for players somewhat in the fashion of a baseball dugout which would keep them from close contact with fans. He pointed out that the most rabid fans often make it a point to get seats behind the opposing players' bench.

Whether or not anything can be done about this is questionable but it certainly is worth while considering. Of all the games I've seen, I consider lacrosse the most difficult for players to hold their tempers and when they come off the floor for a rest, it is understandable that they find it even more difficult to retain control when they are subjected to virulent abuse from spectators within a few feet. And, believe me, that happens in Victoria just as often as it does in Nanaimo.

Oh, yes, there was a postscript: "Don't plan any trips in the fall."

Why not, Frank? Maybe Blair Cook and Dr. Ross Brebner would let me come along if the Native Sons make that trip to Ontario for the Mann Cup final instead of the Shamrocks.

Ladder Derby Chairman Clicks In Sixth Week with Big Salmon

Derby-chairman Alf "Andy" Anderson joined other anglers making bids for berths in the August 22 fish-off of the annual Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association ladder derby yesterday, as 19 fish were weighed in for the sixth weekly competition.

The improved fishing more than filled the 49 rungs available in this week's ladder and, with a large number of fishermen expected on the Inlet today, many more are expected to lose their hold before the weekly contest closes tonight.

Anderson weighed in the second largest fish of the day—an 18½-pounder brought in at Brentwood to take over the third rung. T. R. Charlton topped the day's catches and grabbed the top spot with a 23½-pound spring, entered at the Goldstream end.

Next game: Monday, New Westminster at PNE Indians.

NANAIMO — PNE Indians strengthened their grip on second place in the Inter-City Lacrosse League last night by downing Nanaimo Native Sons, 13-9, in an overtime battle at Nanaimo.

Trailing most of the way, the Sons managed to knot the score at 9-9 well into the fourth period, when they had the redskins momentarily disorganized in face of a last-ditch attack.

The game saw Sons' coach Arnie Duggan banished in the third period for tangling with referee Gordie Folka and from that point in, the playing floor was continually being showered by paper and debris from the irate fans. Johnny Lumley also drew a major penalty in the fourth period and went right after Folka's scalp but was held in check by his teammates before doing any real damage.

Sons were minus the service of their starry netminder, Fred Fulla, and stripped Alf Shuker up from senior "B" ranks. Shuker, after a wobbly start, came through with a creditable display.

NEW YORK (AP) — The American League pennant race tightened Saturday night when the New York Yankees defeated the Washington Senators 9-1, to move within two games of the first-place Cleveland Indians, who dropped a 3-0 decision to the Chicago White Sox in a day game. Jack Harshman and Sandy Consuegra tossed the shutout.

The National League action also produced good news for the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers, who whipped Philadelphia while the league-leading New York Giants were losing to Pittsburgh.

EIGHT STRAIGHT

The Yanks collected 14 hits off four Washington hurlers—Bob Porterfield, Bunky Stewart, Camilio Pascual and Gus Keriazakos to run their winning streak to eight straight.

[illegible] each hit home runs for the Yanks. Bob Wiesler was the winner, although he required help from Harry Byrd and Whitey Ford.

The Giants' lead was trimmed to five and one-half games as their pitching and defense fell apart enough for Pittsburgh to hang up a 10-7 victory. The Giants used seven pitchers and committed five errors in losing to the last-place Pirates for the seventh time in 16 games.

The Dodgers, meanwhile, rested behind Billy Loes, who coasted to a 10-5 victory over Philadelphia despite a four-run rally in the ninth by the Phils. Loes' second straight complete game victory was made certain by an 18-hit attack featured by Gil Hodges' 23rd home run, double and single.

Cincinnati crept to within a half game of fourth-place Milwaukee by beating the Braves 7-3 on the strength of a five-run uprising in the sixth inning. Wally Post's three-run home run was the big hit.

The White Sox, getting back in the American League race after dropping four in a row to the tribe last week end, now trail the Indians by five games. A three-run splurge sparked by rookie Ron Jackson provided all the White Sox runs.

Victoria Four Fourth In BEG Rowing Trials

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Victoria's James Bay four-oared crew and coxswain came fourth Saturday in the British Empire Games rowing trials on Welland Canal near here.

St. Catharines rowing club took the event in 8:07.4, eight lengths ahead of Hamilton Leanders and Toronto Argonauts.

UBC WINS EIGHTS

University of British Columbia, rowing under Vancouver rowing club colors, stroked to an easy five-length victory in the senior eights. Given little chance in pre-race speculation, the sparkling crew routed St. Catharines, Hamilton Leanders and Toronto Dons in 6:19.4.

The team took a few seconds to hit its victory stroke and it wasn't until the 500-yard mark that they left highly-favored St. Kits in the wake a length behind.

Bob Williams easily qualified for the games' singles. The Hamilton boy took the lead from first dip and in the first quarter-mile was already two lengths in front of Kelowna's Ray Bostock. Half-way down the course, Bostock was overtaken by Harold Duncan of the Penticton club.

Larry Stephan and Don Guest of Toronto Don Rowing Club won the heavy doubles in the fast time of 8:09.4. There was no second or third as Les Smith and G. Campbell of Vancouver collided with Bill Hammond and Tom Smith of Hamilton near the finish line.

Few American Stars Enter Canadian Open

VANCOUVER (BUP) — Entries poured in Saturday for the 1954 Canadian Open golf championships here next week, with Canadians standing their best chance in 40 years of copping the $15,000 in prize money.

The four-day event, slated for the 18-hole Point Grey Golf and Country Club Wednesday through Saturday, was expected to draw about 150 entries. Some 110 were already on hand.

Practice rounds will be run off Monday and Tuesday, with Canadians favored to show up well with few top-flight Americans on hand because the big money pro golf tournaments are being held in the eastern United States this year.

The par-72 Point Grey course, with difficult tree hazards belying its easy-looking route, was originally laid out in farm land in 1922, but has been almost entirely revamped in the past two years.

"It's almost impossible to call a winner of the Open before it is played," Point Grey pro Leroy Goldsworthy said. "I've predicted that a card of 276 could win this year's Open, but I could be wrong."

Outstanding Canadians such as Stan Leonard of Vancouver, Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon, Sask.; Henry Martell of Edmonton and Gerry Kesserling of Windsor, Ont., stood their best chances in years of becoming the first Canadian to win the Seagram Gold Cup since Karl Keffer of Ottawa turned the trick in 1914 at the Toronto Golf Club.

CHAMP NOT COMING

American Dave Douglas, who won the Open with a 273 at Toronto Scarboro to beat out 125 other shotsmiths last year, did not enter this year's edition. Top American entry so far was Lawson Little of Pebble Beach, Calif., who won the 1936 Canadian Open and 1940 U.S. Open.

Aussies Jeer English XV In Team Scrap

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — An international rugby football game between a touring British team and a team representing the state of New South Wales turned into a fist fight here today and had to be stopped by stadium police.

The crowd of 30,000 jeered and shouted "go back to England" to the visiting team as the players punched and wrestled in the muddy field.

The trouble began when an Englishman was sent off the field by the referee. Soon afterwards the players quit playing to trade punches.

Fleming Rallies To Win PNGA Title; Seattle Youngster Ladies' Champion

BY JAN GLENDAY

Bob Fleming, 23-year-old Victoria clothing salesman, made a remarkable recovery yesterday at the Royal Colwood Golf Club and went on to edge Lyle Crawford of Vancouver at the 37th green in one of the most thrilling finals in the history of the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championships.

TERRIFIC RALLY

Trailing by two holes with two holes to go, the steel-nerved Fleming reeled off three straight pars while the 21-year-old British Columbia amateur champion faltered under the tremendous pressure to bring Victoria its first PNW championship in 41 years.

The last time a city golfer won it was in 1913 when A. V. Macan took the crown at Butte, Montana, and Macan was one of the first to congratulate Fleming on his first PNW victory yesterday, adding the perfect ending to one of the Gorge Vale amateur's greatest days.

While a disbelieving gallery was still recovering from the effects of the slam-bang finish, Fleming finished off the match on the first extra hole, getting down with a par four while his jittery opponent holed out in five after rolling over the green with his second shot.

It was the third all-Canadian final in the 53-year history of the event and the second time in three years that a British Columbia golfer has come out on top. Bill Mawhinney, now a Vancouver professional, won it in 1952. The other all-Canadian finals occurred in 1912 and 1901.

GREATEST YEAR

For Fleming, it just about wrapped up every available title in the Pacific Northwest. Twice named to B.C.'s Willingdon Cup team and a cinch for this year's squad, the dapper, cool-headed shotmaker won the provincial title in 1953 and was a member of the Morse Cup team.

It was a heartbreaking defeat for the brash, compact-swinging Mainland star as he played brilliant golf until the last three holes and appeared to have his first PNW title wrapped up.

There was never more than a two-hole difference in the tense and exciting match, marred in the morning round by a downpour. Fleming held a one-hole lead after nine holes, maintained his margin after 18 holes but started the 28th hole all square with his opponent.

GOOD PUTTING

Fleming and Crawford, both at their best under pressure, gave a brilliant display of putting in the clutch and, generally, both were on the green in regulation figures. As the match developed, it appeared more and more that a break would decide the championship as both swingers made few mistakes and hugged par.

Fleming had 26 pars, seven bogies, a double-bogie and three birdies included in his round while Crawford matched regulation figures on 20 holes and had five birdies and 11 bogies. Fleming had 37-37—74 in the morning round and 34-38—72 on the second 18. Crawford fired a 38-37—75 on the first 18 and had 34-37—71 on the second 18.

TURNING POINT

The 35th hole will be long remembered. Crawford got away a good drive and reached the edge of the green in two. Fleming was also well out but had to play his second shot under the branches of an oak tree.

With Crawford needing only a half to close out the match, Fleming laced a tremendous iron on the green for what was probably his greatest shot under pressure in the match. He got down in two putts while Crawford three-putted for the first time, missing a six-footer.

On the 36th hole, Crawford hit a tree with his second shot, probably saving a serious situation in the rough, while Fleming was on the green in two. Fleming's long putt for a birdie stopped inches short of the cup while Crawford, after a chip and putt, missed a 12-footer to send the match into extra holes.

One Bad Nine Costs City Woman Chance

Mrs. Derek Rhys-Jones of Victoria failed in her bid to bring Victoria its first Pacific Northwest Golf Association women's championship in 27 years at the Royal Colwood Golf Club yesterday but put up a tremendous battle against a younger American opponent.

MAKES IT CLOSE

Playing over the 6,499-yard Colwood layout, Mrs. Rhys-Jones carried Ruth Jesen, 17-year-old golfing wizard from Seattle, to the 35th green before finally losing out by a 3 and 1 score. Miss Jessen became the youngest golfer ever to win the PNW crown.

A driving rain kept the gallery to a minimum during the first 18 holes but the weather cleared and the golfing improved in the afternoon round.

Mrs. Rhys-Jones, seeking to become the first Victoria winner since 1927 when Mrs. Violet Pooley Sweeney won her fifth PNW championship, had one had nine and couldn't make up the deficit although she gave her stocky opponent a bad scare down the home stretch.

Mrs. Rhys-Jones fired a 43 on the first nine as compared to the long-driving blond's 44 and held a one-hole lead at the turn. But she soared to a 50 on the second nine while Miss Jessen shot a steady 42 and started the final 18 holes four holes down.

Starting at the 10th hole, the promising Seattle swinger won five of the next nine holes, getting three pars, two birdies and a sensational eagle three on the women's par five, 393-yard 16th hole.

COMES BACK

Miss Jessen went five holes up at the 19th but Mrs. Rhys-Jones fought back to win three holes in a row, the 25th, 26th and 27th. She knocked down a 20-foot putt on the 27th, giving her a second straight 43 on the front nine.

But that was as close as the Victoria shotmaker got. She won the 29th and 31st holes while losing the 28th and 30th and Miss Jessen clinched it at the 35th green, getting a birdie four.

Mrs. Rhys-Jones, who ousted former champion Edean Anderson Ihlanfeldt in a quarter-final upset, continued her brilliant play on and around the greens yesterday but it wasn't enough to offset Miss Jessen's long tee shots, which average about 230 yards.

The Victoria player had only one three-putt green while Miss Jessen, who won her first major tournament, took three putts on three greens and continually had trouble with her short game.

BY GRANTLAND RICE

There seems to be a slight tendency lately to start rushing a number of young stars into the great hall of fame before some of their enthusiasts are even making them members of the all-time all-star cast.

They don't seem to realize Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Tris Speaker and Hans Wagner needed from 22 to 24 years to earn their coronets and solidify their fame.

There was no morning-glory touch to their position in the game. It is all well enough to give such rising young stars as Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, Eddie Mathews and Jim Piersal rousing rounds of cheers after each new deed. But to start comparing them with Cobb, Wagner or Ruth or with Speaker and Joe DiMaggio is crowding things a bit.

* * *

It might be remembered that Cobb had to play more than 3,000 games, make over 4,000 hits, steal as many as 80 to 90 bases yearly and average .367 for 24 years to earn his place. It wasn't the ball or bat in use during those years that had anything to do with his terrific marks. It was Ty's high-geared physical, nerve and mental qualities that were involved in these productions. And they had to carry on at top speed for 24 years.

Ruth had to be one of the best of all left-handed pitchers for five years, had to hit more than 700 home runs, including 60 in one season, and in addition had to be a star outfielder to gain his rating.

Speaker was a great outfielder with the speed of an infielder. Playing in the days of the dead ball, he could play shallow to back up the infield and then speed far into the outfield in case of a long-hit ball. Speaker, without question, studied hitters more closely and was a better judge of where to play than any outfielder I have ever watched. I often saw Tris shift a matter of 50 or 60 feet between successive batsmen.

* * *

The American League has had six great outfielders, counting in their attack—Cobb, Ruth, Speaker, Joe Jackson, DiMaggio and Ted Williams.

The National League has known or still has on hand Stan Musial, Mike Donlin, Terry Moore, Country Slaughter and Duke Snider. The Dodgers' Duke is no newcomer — he came to the Dodgers seven years ago. He never really found himself until 1952. His batting average at the end of the 1953 campaign was .301.

American League outfielders, among the top growth, outhit the National Leaguers by a wide margin. There have been no Cobbs, Ruths, Speakers, Jacksons, or DiMaggios in the National League — except Stan Musial.

Stan has been in a recent slump, but after 16 years of professional baseball, he is due for a slump now and then.

It might be just as well to delay the comparison with the young players of today and the greats that used to be.

Big Welcome Awaits Athletes

Representing the beauty division of the $25,000 welcome awaiting some 850 British Empire Games athletes in Vancouver, these Vancouver girls are ready to start their hostess duties. They are pictured in front of new, 30,000-seat stadium where track field events of July 30-August 7 games will be held. An RCMP musical ride, a $3,000 Indian style open-air banquet with Indian dancing are among events planned by city to entertain delegates from 25 British Commonwealth countries.

Plenty of Accommodation For Empire Games Fans

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Empire Games will open here in three weeks. But already auto court and hotel operators are wondering where their next paying guest is coming from.

James V. Hughes, commissioner of the Vancouver Tourist Association, said in an interview that the situation is serious for many operators.

Apparently it all goes back to a rumor that there isn't an available room within 60 miles of Vancouver for the week the Games will run. It has steered away prospective customers for the motel and hotel operators.

Some auto court owners in the lower Fraser Valley area say they will go broke unless there is a sharp upswing in business.

The number of guests in motels in the Vancouver area has declined in some instances to 30 per cent.

GUARANTEE ROOMS

Sam Rosen, ticket chairman of the Games, said reported fears of poor accommodation were unfounded and any visitor "will be guaranteed a room and tickets to any event they choose except the last day of swimming."

Residents who have never let a room in their lives have been persuaded to open their homes to Games visitors, he added.

The Games housing committee has had poor luck with arrangements for accommodations. Only 50 applications have been received for 4,600 private quarters, 325 requests have come in for 1,298 hotel facilities and 325 requests have been made for the 648 motel reservations.

Nearly $160,000 worth of tickets have been sold but many applicants are either driving to Vancouver for the day or staying with friends.

A leading auto court said this was the poorest year in his experience. Usually the "no vacancy" sign is up by 3 p.m. daily, but this year his motel has not been filled before 9 or 10 p.m.

Pro Title to Leonard; 205 New Meet Record

EDMONTON (CP) — Stan Leonard of Vancouver Marine Drive Golf Club swept to his fifth win in the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association championship in Edmonton this afternoon.

Leonard totaled a record five-under-par 205 — which was three up on defending champion Henry Martell of Edmonton Highlands after the 54 holes of medal play.

Leonard, who has also been the top Canadian in the Canadian Open for five years, finished the last 18 holes with a three-under-par 67. On the tournament's final hole he sank a sensational 35-foot putt for a birdie three. His 67 was the lowest single-round score of the tourney.

Leonard won the CPGA title in 1940, 1941, 1950 and 1951. Besides his Canadian Open victories, he has been seven times winner of the Alberta Open, and has won three times in the British Columbia Open and once in the Saskatchewan Open.

Martell held one up to the 14th hole. He was leading Leonard by one stroke in the first half of the final round before he got snagged in the bush. Despite a remarkable recovery, he ended up two over par on the par-three eighth hole when he faltered on a four-foot putt.

Martell finished with a two-under-par 208. He had a one-under 69 in both the first and second rounds and a par 70 on the final lap.

Third in the tournament was 25-year-old Jack Kay of Montreal Mount Bruno with a one-over-par 211. Al Balding, pro at the Credit Valley Club in Port Credit, Ont., who won the pro-amateur tournament at Phoenix, Arizona last year, was fourth with a 212.

A three-time winner of the CPGA title, Jules Huot of Montreal Laval Sur Le Lac, finished fifth with a three-over-par 213.

The winner of the 1945 CPGA, Bill Kerr, pro at Montreal Beaconsfield, was five over par with a 215 in sixth spot.

A three-time winner, Stan Horne of Montreal Islemere, who is one of the two men who have won the CPGA for three successive years, finished with rounds of 74, 71 and 70 for a 215.

FLETCHER SEVENTH

Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon's Country Club, top Canadian in the Canadian Open last year, was in seventh position with a 217.

Leonard, who set the Mayfair course record of 64 in 1951, won $750. Martell got $600 and Jack Kay took $500. In all, there were 22 cash prizes totaling $4,175.

Haegg's Last Record Smashed in England

LONDON (AP) — An unheralded Briton, 28-year-old wartime parachutist Freddie Green, Saturday smashed the world three-mile running record and with his startling 13:32.2 clocking erased the last of the Gunder Haegg world marks from track and field annals.

Green's time, which erased the Swedish wonder runner's records were on the books since May, Roger Bannister of Britain and John Landy have bettered his mile mark with their four-minute epics.

Landy of Australia also broke the 1,500 meter record of the great Swede. Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia, a month ago, ended his reign over the 5,000 meters.

Haegg's two-mile 2,000 and 3,000-meter marks were erased previously.

Saturday, at the British Amateur Athletic Association championships, Green came home in a thrilling finish a few inches ahead of Chris Chataway.

Both Green, who never had won a British title nor an important race, and Chataway, the 23-year-old brewer who ran second to both Bannister and Landy in their famous miles, were clocked two-tenths of a second faster than Haegg's set up in 1942.

BOTH GET CREDIT

Both will have their times sent up for joint approval by the International Amateur Athletic Association.

In their day—only 10-12 years ago—the Haegg world marks were accepted as the peak of athletic endeavor. Now all are gone.

Strangely, the last Haegg world mark to go was his most vulnerable. It was set while Haegg was on his way to his 5,000 meter mark.

Strangely, also, the man who broke the mark had no apparent confidence he would even win the race, let alone go on to a world record.

Green was so accustomed to being little more than a pacemaker he actually slowed down just as the last lap got underway.

U.K. Hopes Oil, Atom Answer to Power Pinch

LONDON (AP)—Britain may ease the strain on its coal supply by using oil and eventually atomic energy to operate electric power plants.

The plan was laid out last week in the House of Commons by Geoffrey Lloyd minister of fuel and power who spoke in support of a plea that electricity

Lloyd said that by 1965 advanced type atomic power stations might be constructed but that in the meantime the possibility of using oil as a power plant fuel is being examined.

Lloyd called on "the one source capable of making a sufficiently massive contribution to production of electricity while nuclear energy power plants are undergoing experimentation."

The government intends to equip a new power station being built at Marchwood with a dual firing apparatus which could use both coal and oil, Lloyd told the House. He said the cost of generating electricity would be the same as if coal alone were used.

The British electricity authority is considering whether to install the dual system else

The minister predicted that the atomic power stations envisioned would be run day and night to make the biggest possible savings of coal.

Britain's atomic energy department has already begun construction of a nuclear power station largely on an experimental basis. It is to be completed within two years and it is planned to use some of the power commercially.

Besides the possibility of using oil to stretch its coal reserves, Lloyd said gas is also being made.

The bill on which Lloyd spoke calls for far-reaching capital development plans for Britain's nationalized fuel and power industries. The measure would increase by $900,000,000 the amount of investment for the two industries.

The House approved the bill leading state.

Britain has been plagued by coal shortages in the winter months since the end of the Second World War. At times this has resulted in load shedding by power stations and limits on domestic consumption of electric current.

Springy Playroom Floor Easily Laid in Basement

BY J. RALPH DALZELL
Author of Books on Home Building and Repair

Here is a novel playroom floor idea. I found my cellar floor was the most expensive thing to improve cheaply. It is covered without great cost. This floor is warm and soft and a good sound barrier penetration from the concrete base. (See picture.)

Start with a dry, level concrete floor. Wherever water has collected, wash it thoroughly with soapy water. Rinse off soapy water with a stiff brush, removing any grease spots. Cut out and fit neoprene or hose rigid insulation board to cover completely the floor. Then mark each piece for its position and remove the insulation.

Many readers have requested information on and asked how to make furring strips, cabinets, mail boxes, carpet strips, dispensers and the like to surfaces where ordinary nails should not be driven or where the hard, hard walls resist drilling for fasteners.

Picture A shows an anchor bolt. Its base contains a very strong adhesive which fastens it to any surface. When applied, the nail is in position so furring strips can be hammered onto the nail penetrates them to their full length.

Picture B shows an anchor bolt for installing metal cabinets, dispensers and the like. A Spread a generous coating of asphalt emulsion on the cellar floor. Follow the directions recommended for the emulsion used. Then use the suction board. The emulsion will act as an adhesive. Next, cut and fit quarter-inch hardboard to completely cover the insulation board and remove it. Again spread the emulsion and place the hardboard pieces in position.

The last step is to lay the asphalt tile following the directions and mastic recommended by the makers. Add a baseboard and you have the best floor that money can buy.

Confidence Grows On Grain Markets

During the past few days [illegible] there has been a marked change in market sentiment, says the James Richardson and Sons weekly grain letter.

Wheat prices in the U.S. have shown unexpected strength, clearly indicating that the price support program is having its effect and that the government policy of providing storage is proving adequate. MAN MURRELL was very happy that evening. He felt a comfortable warmth under Eddie Waycross' roast beef and mashed potatoes. He had had a couple of beers, and was ready for the fight that he had been contemplating for days. But what is a good fighter? If the committee had been prompt in calling Murrell and Jim Lopat to the ring, they would have moved slowly and cautiously. But the delay gave Murrell time he needed to reach it. Lopat Went had appeared before a jury against him and had lost.

Murrello had ever since the announcement of the selection of Jim Lopat as the weekend boss to be reported promptly at 8:30 Wayerosa Tuesday and seem something he resented. He should have been on the job. Two good reasons why he should be there were his wife and the boy in high school. The boy needed a bat. He's captain of the team. Q. E. D. "No. What did he say?"

He asked me how I got to know Lopat. I told him I had never met the man. Then he said, 'Next time we get you Murrello. Until then, so long.' But there won't be any next time for Herndon."

Nobles of Lady Royal Spend Summers, Winter Aboard Miracle Trawler

By GWEN CASH

UNTIL she married Jack Noble, Marna McLean knew nothing of the salt chuck or of ships. She had always lived far inland. A tragedy took her to sea. Her airman husband was stricken with polio. Both his arms and legs were paralyzed. It looked as if he would never walk again.

Five months after the attack one fine June morning Marna helped him aboard a 75-foot trawler the Lady Rowland and they set out to sea. He had grim determination. She had spunk. Six weeks later he walked ashore. Today after five years Jack is completely recovered and Marna is an ocean-going housewife. Her kitchen is a six by six galley. For months at a time she talks with no one but her husband and their crew hand, sees no women at all. She knows the heavenly constellations but is out of touch with Hollywood's stars. Her pantry is a stern hold packed with ice or tuna fish. Her bed a narrow bunk and a sleeping bag. She says she wouldn't live in a house for all the gold in the world.

WINTER REST

During the winters when the Lady Royal is tied up in Victoria, B.C., she has time to knit, study and listen to the radio. Marna weighs in the neighborhood of 120 pounds. Summers when she's heaving tuna out of the ocean as well as cooking for two husky men and taking her turn at the wheel, she scales 110 pounds.

She has bright hazel eyes, soft dark hair, a waist you can span with your two hands and looks deceptively fragile. Her wrists are steel, her ankles tiger strong and she balances herself like a ballet dancer. It's necessary, she says, when green water breaks over the Lady Royal and you have to make out a storm sloop has run off shore.

A STURDY BOAT

The Lady Royal is a Braxham trawler, one of the simplest types of deep-sea fishing boats. Her hull is English oak over superstructure of teak and mahogany. She draws eight and a half feet. Converted from sail to Diesel her cruising range without refueling is close to 1,000 nautical miles. She carries a steadying sail for emergencies. The Nobles do as many as 10,000 nautical miles a season and as frequently 100 miles out in the Pacific.

Asked what she found most difficult in housekeeping afloat Marna replied promptly "not realizing at first how firmly everything had to be stowed. I learned the hard way you can't leave a thing around loose. Everything on such a small boat must be well anchored. Even the eggs as you fry them for breakfast. I break my eggs into a hollow in a round of bread. That fixes them. After a time or two of finding tea, pepper and salt all mixed up I learned to handle that situation, too."

WANDERING HAM

"But I never will forget the first ham I cooked at sea. It was just done and looked delicious, when Jack unexpectedly altered course. The ham flew out of the pan, hitting the ceiling and rebounding onto the floor. Try as I would I could not retrieve it. Finally I had to eat it as it was."

The Nobles' home Marna said would be in Victoria. "I suppose I never will get used to it."

Black Magic, Witchcraft Is Spreading in Germany

By ANTONY TERRY

GOVERNMENT and religious authorities in West Germany are concerned about a nation-wide upsurge of witchcraft and organized superstition.

While officials are deciding how best to curb the tendency toward the occult practices, a Hamburg teacher has started a one-man campaign against the widespread "black magic" appeals to spirits and demons.

Sixty-five-year-old Johann Kruse wants the West German government to ban the numerous books on black magic that are being sold all over the country. He claims they are the cause of the spread of evils among Germans.

One of these books the "Sixth and Seventh Book of Moses" is published by a famous Bruno Wickin the Rhine zone. In its 154 pages are descriptions of "mystic customs and rituals to drive out the evil eye." Though the book costs $28 [illegible] bound edition [illegible] copies have been [illegible]

Old Victoria Gas Plant Changes Over

By ALEC MERRIMAN

THE historic old Pembroke Street gas plant, part of which was brought to Victoria in windjammers around the Horn, will fall into disuse this fall when the B.C. Electric gas department changes over from manufactured gas to the use of liquid petroleum air gas.

Nowadays associated mainly with smoke and a gassy smell, the old gas plant has seen Victoria grow from a fort to a thriving city. It manufactured the gas to light the first saloons and until electricity replaced gas lighting it supplied the gas to light Victoria streets.

Although the gas company was formed in 1860 37 years before the B.C. Electric came into existence the gas works is generally accepted as the "daddy" of B.C. Electric operations.

The Victoria gas works is undoubtedly the oldest continuing industry in Victoria and most likely in B.C. With the possible exception of the gas manufacturing industry in San Francisco it is the oldest established industry of its kind on the Pacific Coast.

The old gas manufacturing plant on Pembroke Street will probably be dismantled after the changeover takes place but the two big holders which have become a landmark at Cowichan and Pembroke will be retained for gas storage.

Most of the gas works employees will be absorbed into other jobs with the B.C. Electric Company.

Formation of the gas company was a dream of a group of local citizens mostly in their early 20s which began in October 1859.

RIGHT TO LIGHT

On the 19th of that month these citizens petitioned the Legislative Assembly of the Colony for the right to incorporate themselves into a gas company to supply Victoria with gas.

Mr. Little seems to have been the moving spirit in the affair. He was the man who saw the possibilities of the new use of gas for lighting and seems to have had a genuine desire to improve the city in which he lived.

It was generally admitted that deposited at this time the Victoria streets were very badly in need of lighting. The size of the Chain Gang that moved daily about the city's streets could breed dark deeds.

NEST BUILDING

The cedar waxwing nests throughout the province during the summer and some years are very abundant on the south end of Vancouver Island. Last year 1953 cedar waxwings were very common in the Victoria area. These birds nest in both deciduous and coniferous trees. They usually built the nest out towards the tip of the limb which makes it hard to get at. The nest varies with the individuals building it. Some are bulky structures made of coarse grasses, twigs, bits of string, wool, or whatever happens to be handy, others, in certain sections, build their nests entirely of fine lichen moss and fibres or spanish beard moss as it is commonly and erroneously known in British Columbia. When building waxwings have a peculiar habit of flying away from the nests of other birds and as they show a distinct preference for wool the owner rests in their area are apt to be stripped of this material.

ON THE WING

The cedar waxwing lays from three to five pale green blue eggs that are spattered marked with black and brown dots. The eggs hatch out in from 10 to 16 days and about three weeks later the young are on the wing. This happens earlier in the year than in the case of most birds for the cedar waxwing is a berry eater and the berries are ripened to that period of the year when the fruits are ripe. July and August are the usual nesting months for the species but very often broods are hatched out much later.

The Bohemian nests further north or at higher altitudes the eggs are similar to those of the cedar waxwing but are larger as befits a bird that is found as far north as the south end of Vancouver Island but most of them head south into the United States and the Panama. The Bohemian however is a winter bird with us and is most often seen in December, January and February.

kind of hunger that carried great risks. Many were not much more than 20 feet from a gas main and to get service pipes for conveying the gas to lamps at $15 to $20 each later. The company further offered to lend excavators and service the lamps for $10 a month. The price of gas for street lighting service was set at $6.50 per 1,000 cubic feet.

The offer was accepted and Victoria's first street lights were gaslit.

WET METERS

Early gas meters worked on the wet system and an exact amount of water had to be mainta ned in the meters or they would not work. These wet meters were subject to freezing in winter weather.

Customers were warned on many occasions of the freezing danger and advised that they could be overcome by adding alcohol to the water in the meters. It also said if were not necessary for the company to supply whisky would be quite all right.

The experiment methods of communication apparently worked quite as well 50 years ago as it does today. Rumor had it that the Victoria Board of Trade that the gas company had offered to sell out to the B.C. Electric for $192,000 or 80 cents on the dollar the gas company being capitalized at $240,000. The B.C. Electric said it was willing to do this if the gas company would sell enough stock to the B.C. Electric to give it control.

NO MONOPOLY

The board of trade feared the B.C. Electric would have a monopoly and the gas company business. There would be no competition between the two companies. The board of trade pressed the city council to buy the gas company but was unsuccessful in its petitions.

On April 29, 1887, the B.C. Electric announced it had purchased the gas works. News papers expressed surprise and the consensus of opinion was that the gas company would continue to operate as a separate concern and that the public would get gas without interruption.

Since taking over the gas works the B.C. Electric has embarked on a continuous program of improvement and expansion of gas services.

The conversion now has been completed and the change over to liquid petroleum air gas is another modernization project to bring better service at low cost users.

The manufacturing plant with its stacks will no longer belch smoke and soot while petroleum brought here by railway tank cars, will be stored in clean steel tanks.

NATURAL HISTORY

The Waxwing, a Pretty Bird Common Throughout Province

Two species of waxwing occur in British Columbia the cedar waxwing (right) and the Bohemian waxwing on the left in the adjoining illustration. The birds are very similar in appearance but if you examine them closely you will observe that the Bohemian is considerably larger and has prominent yellow markings on the upper side of the flight feathers a feature lacking in the cedar waxwing. In addition the undertail coverts are a bright chestnut color in the Bohemian yellowish in the cedar. The body color of both birds is a soft mauve brown but the cedar waxwing has a suffusion of yellow principally on the underparts.

The black mask throat and the prominent crest were further in making these birds very easy to identify and there is no other bird with which they can be confused.

Ladysmith Observes 50th Birthday

BY M. LITTLE

"NICE place this," said a young man viewing the city and harbor for the first time.

Well, we think so too. It's easy to say nice things about our city nestling so picturesque on the slopes of Oyster Harbour.

Mayor Leonard Ryan, having occasion recently to review the city's remarkable progress over the past years stated, with pride, "Ladysmith is fast becoming a nice, modern little city."

Ladysmith is 55 miles north of Victoria—a beautiful, friendly place to spend a day, a week, or a lifetime. It is the home of British Columbia's oyster cultivation which now extends to adjacent islands. It is also a shipping point for huge timber holdings of both Comox Logging & Railway Co., and Macmillan & Bloedel Ltd.

A Swedish traveler in North Africa has discovered the descendants of the Barbary pirates who escaped an annihilation by the U.S. marines at Tripoli and by Charles X's expeditions to Algiers. It seems that the ilk of the sea-scouring moors, whose eagle nests atop the rocky Moroccan shore lie abandoned, have simply moved to Casablanca where they run night clubs.

The itinerant northerner became convinced of the fact when he had to pay $18 for a shot of Scotch at "Mohammed's hideaway" in the north African metropolis. Other grandsons of the seafaring ruffians operate taxis, restaurants and hotels in Casablanca, Meknes, Taradite, Marrakesh, etc. — and let the unwary visitor beware!

CELEBRITIES I HAVE KNOWN

Wandering Willie in Politics McInnes Charmed Audiences

By JAMES MORTON

THE recent announcement of the retirement of W. W. B. McInnes at the age of 83 from Vancouver magisterial bench resurrected memories. It recalled my first vision of a young man in the legislative session of 1905. He sat at the end of the rear bench of the legislative chamber. He was short and plump and sparkled with a vitality that seemed even to illuminate his shining spectacles.

In that session he spoke seldom, but when he did it was with a natural fluency and in a clear ringing voice that always captivated the House. Rumors had gone around that he had been disappointed in the choice of J. A. MacDonald of Rossland as leader of the Liberal opposition, instead of himself, and someone compared him to Achilles sulking in his tent.

Certainly there was no suggestion of sulking in his attitude and appearance. He was generally smiling and his speeches were tinged with good humor. Still, he did not stay long there long. He was shortly appointed governor of Yukon Territory, from which dignity he descended again to continue his meteoric and changing political career.

When I first saw him he was a prominent figure in Canadian politics. At the age of 24 he was elected federal Liberal member for Alberni. He impressed Ottawa like the second Pitt who became prime minister of Great Britain at the same age. His gift of oratory stormed the Dominion parliament, and there were those who said that if he had been a foot taller he might have become prime minister. However, in 1900 he retired from the federal house and was elected to the provincial legislature to become, for a short time, a cabinet minister in one of the shortest governments in the history of that province. Then he resigned and was appointed governor of the Yukon Territory.

I imagine that he enjoyed this secondary role and was probably pleased to get out of it to the Yukon.

FOR VANCOUVER

From there he was recalled by the Liberal party to contest Vancouver in the election of 1908. He struck in at an unlucky time. It was an era of growth and prosperity, not to say boom, in Vancouver, and the local Conservative government naturally got much of the credit. This was reflected in the good fortune of their candidate George H. Cowan. Before his nomination there had been some division among Conservatives, between McBride followers and Tupperites following Sir Charles. Cowan's nomination healed the breach, and victory was assured.

McInnes made a most vigorous "speaking" campaign. He appeared in halls all over the city, his meetings running about 36. His eloquence always drew a crowd that would laugh and applaud but somehow failed to vote for him. One exception was in that election was the famous fighting Joe Martin who, at odds with all parties in Ottawa, ran as a straight independent. Another was E. T. Kingsley, a famous Socialist. Both he and Martin lost their deposits, but though McInnes was another Tory victim he was returned.

MADE A JUDGE

McInnes next move was his appointment as County Court judge for Vancouver. There he acquitted himself well. While not troubling too much about the intricacies of law he had a quick grasp of facts and his judgment was sound. It was about this time that I became most closely acquainted with him. On leaving the bench he would call the reporters into his room, where we discussed at large the questions of the day. "Billy" as we called him was so genial in manner, so fair minded in judgment, that it was unpossible not to like him. As a partisan there was no bitterness in him. I remember his speaking with admiration of a political opponent, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, as "a high class man," and he had the same view of other political leaders.

His opponents had dubbed him "Wandering Willie," on account of his many changes, and he appeared partly to justify the nickname when he left the bench to become again a Liberal candidate in Vancouver in the conscription election in 1917. Once more his advent was unluckily timed. Vancouver was a hot bed of imperialists waving flags and umbrellas in buoyant patriotism and the Conservatives had a strong candidate in the Hon. H. H. Stevens. Some spoke as if they regarded McInnes' adoption of Laurier's "no conscription" policy as treason to the empire. At one meeting in a rainy day it was hard to restrain some of the women from attacking him with umbrellas, though his polite remonstrance finally subdued their ire. In spite of his eloquent and vigorous campaign his defeat was inevitable.

BACK TO LAW

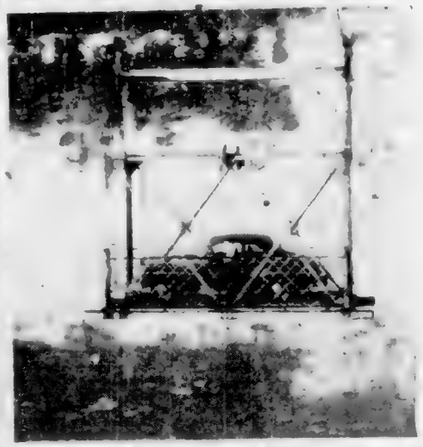
Apparently he had enough of this hopeless battle and for a number of years afterward devoted himself to a private law practice. Finally he was appointed assistant police magistrate of Vancouver, a position he held till his retirement.

Though his political ambitions seemed always destined to be thwarted, he must be remembered as a striking figure in a distinguished family. His father, T. A. McInnes, was in turn lieutenant-governor of BC and senator. His brother Tom, who died a few years ago, was built in a literary way, both in poetry and prose writer. His daughter, a Law Bee. The Old Boy's estate a book worth reading and disclosed a man with a good knowledge of Chinese culture as he had lived among it for some years. This literature and oratory were combined in one notable family.

It Depends on the Figures You See

Who said Canadian girls were short and dumpy? It was, of course, a statistician who has no eye for figures outside of those on a chart. But model expert John Roberts Powers just pays no attention to statistics. "The Canadian girl," he says with confident authority, "is long stemmed." And to prove it, he has models Mae Genno and Bedie Adamson, who were in the Powers' contest for the "long-stemmed Canadian beauty" in Toronto.

Steel Skyboat Over the Fraser



By FRANCIS DICKIE

Celebrating 16 years' air operation without accidents and only one delay, is the North Bend-Boston Bar aerial ferry in British Columbia, only one operated as a public service in North America.

This aerial cage glides back and forth Fraser River 1,000 feet and 80 feet above low water mark. It was erected by public works department to aid settlers where no bridge could span the enormous chasm. Its fare for service rendered: Truck 50c; automobiles 25c; animals, free; capacity, 10 people or animals in number according to size.

The engineers allowed 80 foot clearance believing safety assured. Yet so erroneous was the flood rise in 1949 that rising water came within feet of cage bottom. As the river arrad huge trees and other flotsam floating debris, liable to hit the carriage, service was suspended one week, only delay in 16 years.

Ferry powered by donkey engine, cage moves on three cables. Cage handles 1-ton ramps on other side of chasm. Cand four signals with flags by day, flash lights by night to direct and ing to size.

Women Drivers Get League For Defense Against Men

WASHINGTON — Guess who says women are better drivers than men?

And where is the logical place to lobby for that cause, or any other cause?

Miss Peg Sherwood has left her Cincinnati radio and television work and casual stock car race driving to head a campaign to organize a league for the defense of women drivers.

The fact that the whole thing hangs on a forthcoming movie about sports car racing is apparently lost in Miss Sherwood's hub - thumping for women drivers.

She came to town bearing some nebulous statistics which, as men's accident cost $4.77 per car per mile, and women's accident's costing $2.68 for the same mileage.

And a girl would-be league for the defense of women drivers needs a title.

"We'll put out a little paper on how to handle men drivers when they get that nasty superior look on their faces. It will have tips on driving traffic hints and suggestions and things like that," Miss Sherwood said.

Women are better drivers than men, she contends because women are more cautious, won't take chances like men do. A man breezes along subconsciously thinking "I'm a man, big and virile."

"I don't say I'm not flattered! Any woman likes attention, but that isn't the place for it. They'll take their eyes off the road and keep them off, look the woman driver over and then drop behind her car or cut in quickly ahead of her.

"That she stops, isn't safe driving practice.

"I have been driving since I was 14 and a lot of it in Washington traffic," she continued, "and I've never had an accident."

One of the platform planks of Miss Sherwood's defense league is "not on the basis of the premise that women should be shown the same courtesy that every driver should show another. No matter because she's a woman, unless

Quiet Season for Readers? Publishers Think Otherwise

THE book review editor of a literary journal is wont to take an optimistic view of things. This is going to be the busiest season since the war, so far as books are concerned. On the other hand a trade magazine is authority for the statement that we have seen in many a season's end crop of new books by Anya Seton, Frank Yerby, James Street, Daphne du Maurier, Irving Stone, Frank G. Slaughter, Kenneth Roberts, John Steinbeck and John Dos Passos with William Faulkner's "The Fable" gracing the season. The list of novels on which the Nobel Prize winner has been working for many years is eagerly anticipated as the magnum opus from Mr. Faulkner.

Meanwhile Rutgers University Press is bringing out a new translation of Dante's "The Inferno" by one of the New Jersey school's English professors, John Ciardi. Ciardi is a long-bearded, swarthy, Roosevelt-type of Neapolitan descent. Before the great Italian classic he has the usual attitude of a long line of describing it recently as "a gossip column from Florence." "It's as if," he said, "somebody were writing today and went through hell and said 'I saw Joe' and you have to figure out whether it's the original 'Joe' could be Joe McCarthy. There is no idea that rhyme two lines into English ever entered Dante's life that Ciardi said. So he left the didn't get into the 'Divine Comedy' at some point. It's all worked out fine. Remember Farrell?

CHARLIE FARRELL

By SHEILAH GRAHAM

CHARLEY Farrell deserves distinguished and most devirtuously outrageous today than he was as Janet Gaynor's co-star in "Seventh Heaven" . . . or the keeper again as Gale Storm's dad in the top-rating radio-television sensation, My Little Margie.

"Seventh Heaven" was made 26 years ago when Farrell was 24. Today he really admits to being over 50 and happy to be father role.

It is interesting that many of Farrell's contemporaries still interest in playing Romeo roles. Gary Cooper is 53 but always gets the girl. Humphrey Bogart will be 54 this year. Charles Boyer is 55. Clark Gable is 53. Spencer Tracy is 54 and even highstepping Cary Grant was 50 this January. Bing Crosby is 50. And bless me, even Tyrone Power is 41.

But Charlie Laws has naturally white hair . . . now. He is as chipper as he'd half his age.

"I've played tennis with him and I know," His schedule as co-star of the TV series and radio show combined with the Racquet Club in Palm Springs which he owns would throw a lesser man.

Week ends when Charlie isn't working on "Margie" he drives the 150 miles to Palm Springs in his sporty white convertible. He plays harder than most men work a week as six sets of tennis a day, swims golf and frolics with the guests. Always the host in the way Laws and is first on the job the next day.

Farrell has retained the figure he sported as a beach at Boston, Provincetown, Hyannis Bay, Massachusetts. Charlie attended school there, worked in his father's theatre, went on the road with a travelling stock company and started in Hollywood as an extra. He was a stunt man bit player and featured actor until "Seventh Heaven" made movie history, winning the first Academy Awards.

Twenty years ago Charlie told me by the pool of the Racquet Club "Hell, Hollywood, I want to the desert to buy real estate to set up a tennis club." The sprawling ranch house he built there is now Palm Springs "Who Bought the Farrell" subsequently bought out Bellamy and is today sole owner of the Racquet Club which reportedly brings in $1,000,000 a year.

No Such Thing As An Old Joke Head of Humor Museum Finds

By JUDITH BRIMBERG

RIVIERA BEACH, Fla.—Want to find all the traveling salesmen jokes circulating in America? Or do you have a yen to collect jokes on life insurance? Or jokes on people with knock-knees or dogs or cats or trees?

For a nominal sum, the Museum of American Comedy here at Riviera Beach will be happy to fill your order.

The museum houses over 1,200 volumes of humor, millions of jokes classified into 100 categories, and more than 5,000 props and gadgets connected with humor. Included are such items as Charlie Chaplin's cane, W. C. Fields' cockeyed billiard cue, Ed. Wynn's turban collection and Bob Benchley's famous trick trick golf ball.

The collection as reputed to be the most complete in the United States. The museum is housed as a world laugh center in a room where diners, folk and professional comedians can go to laugh at themselves and each other. It also operates as a reference center on the subject of humor.

SUPPLIED WISIES

When the firm "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" was in production, the director called on the comedy museum to supply all the Brooklyn jokes and tree jokes it could lay hands on. He got thousands. House organs and trade magazines frequently want all the jokes on their specialty.

The museum is run by Bill Treadwell, a New York publicity man and George Lewis, a director of the museum. Treadwell's private collection valued at $50,000 is the largest single display the museum houses.

Treadwell who has edited newspaper humor columns and created the comic strip "Abbie Snerps" became a professional funny man at the age of 17 by contributing gag to "College Humor." This led to writing jobs with Joe "Wanna Buy a Duck?" Penner, Morey Amsterdam, Ted Healy and Mabel Todd. It also resulted in a tremendous gag file and a vast assortment of props, masks, records, posters, books and other paraphernalia.

AN OLD ONE

His collection includes a first edition of "Joe Miller's Joke Book." The volume, properly entitled "Joe Miller's Jests," was published in 1739. Lewis won it from Treadwell in a poker game. Treadwell got even when he traded over to the museum what he said is the only complete proof sheet of the British humor magazine "Punch" in the country dating from the first issue in 1841. The oldest item in the collection was published in London in 1617, a 15 quatrain of political satire called "Political Wit."

"A joke never grows old."

He agrees with the late comedian Tom Howard that every joke like a cat has at least nine lives.

"You can send the living daylights out of a joke in the 1920s, only to have it smile at the Beats and find it still grinning at you," he said.

A good example Treadwell cited is a gag that made the rounds of the horse-and-buggy carriage. It concerned a Ford that had knocked its owner down. A neighbor hearing of this remarked "First time I ever did hear of a motorcar with its own mind." Today, the story is about a man complaining that his electric razor has. "A buckle-rat," he wildly cooks two ways and nails slowly.

Warm Ice Isn't As Cold As It's Cracked Up To Be

It you want your drink to be as cold as it can be, it must be cracked up to be. It can be the cold of course. But it also can be warm comparatively. And "warm" ice cools only one way and more in a hurry. "Cold" ice usually cools two ways and melts slowly.

Under Southern Cross Where Big Birds Nest

BY GEORGE NICHOLSON

SEA birds are far more plentiful and varied in the southern hemisphere where navigators takefixes on the Southern Cross in place of the North Star which we use. This is probably accounted for by the fact that scattered over the different "down under" seas and more particularly in the vicinity of New Zealand and the Australian continent, are numerous islands more favorable for their breeding grounds.

At this period all wild life prefers solitude, especially those birds which nature failed to provide with adequate means of protecting themselves, or their eggs and young, from predatory enemies. Few islands in the northern hemisphere, except in mid-Pacific where it is too warm, afford this protection, they being either inhabited or too close to the mainland.

These southern islands are free of rats, cats or the larger species of owl, all of which prey on the eggs and young of other birds. Mink, marten, raccoon and the number of other small carnivorous animals common to the north and feed of the same diet, are not known, whereas they all seem to find their way to the islands off our coast.

The sub-Antarctic islands on which these birds breed are all a couple more degrees the sea [illegible] As for were [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Financing Set for Project

Definite Word on Race Track Expected at Meeting Next Week

Some definite word on a race track and exhibition grounds for Victoria is expected by next Wednesday, D. B. Carley, manager of the Victoria Riding and Hunt Club, said last night.

He expects to have a meeting early next week with Vancouver business men who have expressed willingness to finance the project.

"All we need is the property and we are ready to start construction," said Mr. Carley who knows the Quadra Heights area is the best suited but would opt for temporary accommodation in the Burnside district as a site has been approved.

There is no question about the financing. Everything is completely above board," Mr. Carley said.

In previous Colonist stories it has been estimated that it would take $100,000 to start the project.

That much would buy the land and start the track. Enough additional money would be needed to bring track standards and accommodations up to par.

Mr. Carley said the B.C. Agricultural Association could get grants to build exhibition buildings of about 10 acres of land was donated to them.

Victoria business men will likely have an opportunity to buy shares in the project, Mr. Carley said.

Action Against Drew Will Spread, Says PC

A leading Victoria supporter of B.C. Progressive Conservative leader Deane Finlayson says the move to overthrow federal leader George Drew will "spread across Canada soon."

Robert J. Patch, vice-president of the B.C. association said last night that moves will definitely materialize in other parts of Canada after the quarterly meeting of the provincial executive at Vernon Saturday.

Other organizations are waiting, said Mr. Patch, to see the outcome of the no-confidence motion against Mr. Drew at the meeting before they act.

He declared the other groups like the B.C. association are dissatisfied with federal opposition party organization.

Mr. Patch conceded that Mr. Finlayson would resign if he lost his fight against the federal leader, but added: "I don't think he will." The decision of the meeting will be second Dealer if not more.

MAY BE OUSTED

The Colonist reported yesterday that Mr. Finlayson would resign within a month if he lost the motion and Major-Gen. G. R. Pearkes, VC, MP might take over. If the motion carried the federal organization might force Mr. Finlayson out.

The report stated the B.C. and federal PC groups were fighting over an attempt by Mr. Finlayson to gain complete control of federal and provincial parties in B.C.

Mr. Patch said the report of an attempt to gain control was "absolutely false," adding Mr. Finlayson has never tried to have any say in federal matters. He described the report as "the newest one I've heard."

Mr. Patch explained a separate federal PC office was set up in Victoria "as but an agreement after the break-up of Coalition in 1952 was to do away with the office."

He claimed Mr. Drew promised that November and last January to close the office but has not done so.

PERSONNEL OPPOSED

Mr. Patch said "the personnel of the office is entirely unacceptable to the B.C. association."

He charged "We have fought and two other times since we were in Government [illegible] Government [illegible] dinner a few years ago."

Beauticians Try To Prove Point

BY DEE LAVOIE

A week or so ago I wrote a story commending the opening of a special clothing store for red headed women in New York and lamenting the fact that nothing had yet been done to provide special cosmetics for we red heads.

The next day, beautician Mrs. Winnona Paret phoned me up and asked that she had plenty of cosmetics that would suit my difficult coloring.

So she and Mrs. C. Jameson came up and gave my freckled face the works.

First of all I got a facial that Mrs. Paret told me should be given about once a week. She tied my hair back with what looked like a length of white crepe paper streamer and went to work.

Actually though, it was me who did the work while Mrs. Paret showed me how the various preparations should be used.

I plastered my face with cleansing cream to remove the make-up I had on first, and tissued that off. Most important thing I was told is to use an upward motion in applying cream.

Then I put a sort of liquid lubricant around my eyes where I'm developing wrinkles by crinkling them when I smile.

ICING CAKE

Then Mrs. Paret took over and did my eyes. She used sea-green eye shadow (she recommended dark green for evenings, brown mascara (presto, I had eyelashes), and brown eyebrow pencil.

Then I powdered. I looked at myself in the mirror. The first I saw looked more sophisticated, and I was. Next I was fixed green at the eyes.

The whole business had taken an hour and a half and I'm sure that have time for a conference of powder and a cup of coffee or I won't be doing it every day.

But now I know that there are cosmetics for red heads.

skin, and then a lotion went on designed to protect my face from cosmetics.

"GOLDEN LOOK"

I put cream rouge on with a tooth pick, blended a liquid foundation over that, and patted on powder with a cotton puff. [illegible] look in the way and this far it looked fine to me, especially as the foundation was in a darker shade than I usually use so that my summer crop of freckles would be blended in.

But we got into a hassle over the lipstick.

I maintain that almost every lipstick, no matter how orange it looks in the tube turns blue when I put it on, and I know that other redheads have the same difficulty.

So I didn't like any of the lipsticks I tried on, even the ones meant especially for the redheads. I ended up by wearing one I disliked least, and agreeing that the one the two beauticians were hoping out for might look nice under different lights.

GREEN SHADOW

Then Mrs. Paret took over and did my eyes. She used sea-green eye shadow (she recommended dark green for evenings, brown mascara (presto, I had eyelashes), and brown eyebrow pencil.

Then I powdered. I looked at myself in the mirror. The first I saw looked more sophisticated, and I was. Next I was fixed green at the eyes.

The whole business had taken an hour and a half and I'm sure that have time for a conference of powder and a cup of coffee or I won't be doing it every day.

But now I know that there are cosmetics for red heads.

Handmade Ware In Soft Colors

Souvenir pottery can be a bit garish, but I came across one that's hand-turned and hand-painted, and in quite subdued colors.

The pieces are made with a creamed cream finish with drips and runs in light cinnamon brown and are decorated with naturalistic dogwood. Victoria Bay is written on each in small letters.

You'll find a big variety, all sort of plates, at $1.50 for luncheon size to $4.95 for dinner size; jugs, the tall squatty ones for $4.00 the tall slender one for $3.50 and my favorites, the bleeder bowls, cake plate for $1.75.

Vases are $.95, little vase shapes are $1.25, and ash trays are $1 and $1.25 depending on size.

Touch of Pink

The only carnations blooming in my garden so far are pink ones with dashes of red on them, that make them look as if they're made of peppermint candy.

Now I've found some artificial ones just the same only much much bigger. One of these would be just the thing to give your costume the touch of pink to [illegible] the summer.

Keep Out Dirt

Most garden gloves are fine for a week or so, then dirt starts to sift in through the fingers and [illegible] thing you know the insides are just as dirty as the outside.

A brand of gloves made of soft [illegible] material with whimsical green thumbs are specially made to keep dirt out and sell for $1.39 a pair. They're easily washed and come in a complete size range.

Beauty and You

By MARION MATTHEWS

While sunglasses protect your eyes and defeate skin-tin this area from glaring and drying sunshine you can emerge with white owl-like circles. Because this in an attractive and as Max Factor Jr. Hollywood make-up artist points out can suggest a look of illness, bags and pale watery eyes, he comes up with the following suggestions.

To a clean skin sponge on a thin veil of make-up in a sun tan shade to harmonize with your newly suntanned face. Apply it evenly and perfectly so your skin is smooth and even in color. Be sure to apply the exact amount you apply to the rest of your face over the areas where there is no suntan at all—over the bridge of your nose, along the sides of your face where the sunglass shafts shaded them from the sun, and around your eyes. This is the first important step.

Now add eyeshadow to the upper part of the goggly-eyed area by applying eyeshadow to the eyelids. Apply it slightly heavier than usual sweeping it out and up beyond the corners of your eyes and fade it up into your eyebrows. If you use blue, green or grey eyeshadow, and it doesn't seem to harmonize with your suntanned skin try a brown shade.

Add extra color to the lower part of the goggle-eyed area, the bridge of the nose and the sides of the face where the sunglass shafts protected the skin, by applying the smallest amount of creme rouge with your finger tips and blend into the line where the sunglasses stopped their protection and where the suntan begins. Blend ever so carefully. This might take a little practice, for if you use too much rouge you will get a different colored area. Apply just enough to balance the color with the rest of your face tones.

Now, apply a matching suntan face powder to every part of your face and apply it abundantly. Remove the surplus with a face powder brush. Then finish your make-up as usual. However, apply more eyelash make-up than you do ordinarily, such your eyebrows more perfectly, and be sure your lipstick gleams with a stay-on lustre, so that eyes and lips will be emphasized. Now, and not until now, add the faintest amount of dry rouge to your cheeks and blend up under the corners of your eyes so that it cuts into the area where the untainted goggly-eyed circle is covered. This will add the final glorifying glamour. Be sure to blend the added rouge with powder and puff so that it is smooth and even.

Rearrange your hair and then stand back from your mirror to see what these few professional steps have done to glorify into real suntan glamour a look you might have almost found hopeless.

Paprika Tops Potato Soup

Here's a rich and delicious soup that's the perfect preface to a cool meal or with cheese a Sunday night supper as pictured. Bring 1½ cups of water to a boil and add a quart of diced pared potatoes, 1 cup, 1½ cups condensed onion soup. Bring to a boil again and cook 1 chicken bouillon cube dissolved in 1 cup water. Cover and cook 20 minutes or until potatoes are tender.

Force the mixture through a sieve and add a pint of cream or evaporated milk, ½ cup of dry sherry, 2 tablespoons of chopped parsley and a twist of freshly ground black pepper. Heat gently but do not boil. Just before serving, stir in 2 tablespoons of grated Parmesan cheese. Dust each serving with paprika.

Salad Nicoise Uses Garlic

Here's a salad traditional in French cookery that is hearty enough for a main [illegible] dish. Named for the port city of Nice, the original use of oil and anchovies reflect the strong flavors different from other cities cooking. Rub a small bowl with garlic and add ¼ cup of olive oil, 1½ tablespoons of vinegar, pits the oil drained from a can of anchovies.

Now add 1½ cups of cooked diced potato, a cup of cooked green beans, 3 tomatoes cut in thin wedges, a thin sliced onion, a green pepper cut in strips and about 18 ripe olives. Add your anchovy fillets, sprinkle liberally with chopped parsley, toss and let marinate in the refrigerator for an hour or so before serving.

Unusual Italian Chicken Dish Named after Town of Mantua

You only have to remember that Mantua is the town where Romeo was banished to, and where he bought the poison with which he killed himself when he thought Juliet was dead. Two Officers Lost in River

WINNIPEG (CP) — RCMP headquarters reported Saturday that two RCMP constables are believed to have been drowned when their patrol boat tipped over in the Red Deer river in northwestern Manitoba north of Swan River.

They were:

Const. J. K. Sanders, 28, of Swan River and Const. R. C. Bloomfield of Saskatoon.

RCMP said the two were on a routine boat patrol near the Porcupine forest reserve.

BOAT OVERTURNED

Const. E. A. Bonderud, an eye witness, said the constables were attempting to go under a bridge when the boat overturned and the fast current swept them downstream.

Pickers Warned on Dogs

NANAIMO—Fish and Game Protective Association has reminded all berry pickers of a law forbidding unleached dogs running loose while picking is in progress. Dogs destroy young birds.

Upland game birds committee reported blue and willow grouse plentiful and conditions good for an excellent crop this year.

Junior club has disbanded for summer but rifle range for juniors is still operating. The club will stage its annual salmon derby August 15.

NANAIMO — Bowen Park Development Association received a cheque for $1,712, proceeds of the recent rotary auction presented at the regular Rotary Club meeting on Friday.

The cheque presented by Nat Martin, auction chairman, was turned over to Harry Cicconi of the park development association in the absence of chairman Stan Dyde.

NANAIMO—The flag of Nova Scotia, a gift of St. Andrew's, N.B. Rotary Club was presented to Nanaimo Rotary by Dr. John Hart Friday. Dr. Hart, director of the Pacific Biological Station, leaves shortly for St. Andrew's, where he will take over from Dr. A. W. Needler, who is coming to head the Nanaimo station.

PARKSVILLE—Plans for the second annual branch picnic were discussed at an executive meeting of Mt. Arrowsmith Branch, Canadian Legion. August 8 has been set as the date and the site will be Powder Point, Nanoose Bay, through permission of A. Y. Johnstone.

Liberals Offer To Provide UN Booklet

United Nations' World Review, a pamphlet withdrawn last winter from B.C. schools by the Social Credit government, may be returned.

Liberal leader Arthur Laing said yesterday "we want to see the UN booklet in every classroom, and a group of people in the Liberal party is willing to pay for it."

The pamphlet was withdrawn "for economy reasons," according to the first government statement, but Attorney-General Robert Bonner later said any school district which asked for the Review would get it.

Withdrawal came after a $1,000 grant given to B.C. in connection with the pamphlet.

Mr. Laing asked the government if it would be willing to accept the funds, and added "we feel such publications are essential in our schools, especially at this time when dark and sinister forces are at work throughout the world."

Beauty Treatment Proves Lethal

HONG KONG (AP)—A Hong Kong coroner's jury held Saturday that Tsui Keeyud, a 32-year-old Chinese woman, died from paraffin injections taken in an effort to develop her bust.

The victim's husband told the court a midwife had administered the injections at the insistence of his wife, who had wanted to improve her figure for the summer bathing season.

Terry Moore Packs Away Daring Gown

LAS VEGAS, NEV. (CP) — The revealing night club dress that shapely Terry Moore put on for her Las Vegas Casino debut Thursday night was still kicking up quite a fuss Saturday.

The low cut gown, costing $3,500 and transparent from the waist up — except for clusters

Why was it abandoned? Press agents differed. A publicity representative for the Flamingo Hotel, where Miss Moore is appearing, said a spokesman for the Mormon Church raised objections. He declined to name the church spokesman. Miss Moore is a Mormon.

But Miss Moore's personal press agent said there was no objection from the church, that Miss Moore decided on her own accord that the dress was too daring.

"I guess I wore it against my better judgment," she said.

As to the revealing dress, it is packed away like the daring white ermine bathing suit which brought on a tempest when she wore it to entertain soldiers in Korea last Christmas time.

Jets Crash In Mid-Air, Pilot Killed

NORTH BAY, ONT. (CP) — Two RCAF Vampire jets of No. 401 City of Westmount reserve squadron plunged to earth Saturday after a mid-air collision and one pilot was reported killed. The other parachuted safely to earth.

Witnesses said the planes were part of a three-plane flight taking part in an air exercise. They said one plane, possibly caught in a downdraft, suddenly dived down and hit one of the other aircraft.

PLUNGE TO EARTH

The second plane plunged to earth, apparently carrying its pilot to his death. The first plane swooped up in screaming climb. Its pilot bailed out and then it too plunged to the earth.

The dead pilot was identified as FO P. A. Read, 23, of Isle Bigras, Montreal.

The pilot who parachuted to safety was Sqdn. Ldr. T. W. Dowbiggin, Montreal.

Witnesses said the third plane in the ill-fated flight circled around the parachuting pilot as he drifted to earth, apparently to mark the spot where he landed.

Logging Death Inquest Set

CAMPBELL RIVER—An inquest will be held Monday into the death of Henry Tanaka, 28, fatally injured in logging operations Thursday on Reads Island.

Tanaka, employed by Operations Logging Company, was struck by a haulback line. He was flown to hospital here but died later Thursday night.

The wildcat once was a sacred animal in Egypt.

Sharp Attack by Stevenson

U.S. Power, Water Policies Hit

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Adlai Stevenson said Saturday the Eisenhower administration has moved "with menacing swiftness against our traditional and time-tested programs of public resources conservation."

In a speech prepared for delivery at a Democratic Party rally here the 1952 Democratic presidential nominee sharply criticized Republican power and water policies.

Stevenson said they add up to "a drastic change in what has been virtually a bi-partisan natural resources policy for almost half a century."

"I don't believe the people" in 1952 "intended their vote as a license to turn the national domain over to private interests," he said.

"I often warned during the campaign of 1952 that the Republican policy of relinquishing the tidelands was also dangerous as a precedent for giving away other assets of the nation that belong to the people. And that is exactly what appears to be happening."

He referred to an "order just issued by President Eisenhower to the Atomic Energy Commission, prohibiting it from contracting" with the Tennessee Valley Authority "for additional power for the government's atomic program and ordering it to contract with a private syndicate at a far higher cost, even allowing for taxes the syndicate would pay."

CHURCHILL, Man. (CP)—The greatest shipping season in the history of this northern port is in prospect this summer with 23 vessels already scheduled for the three-month season.

The bookings are a record for this date—there may be more later.

Last year 31 cargoes totaling 10,784,000 bushels of wheat were shipped, greatest since the port was opened in 1931. There are indications that shipments this year—will top 10,000,000 bushels and shipping to supply mining developments on the west coast of Hudson Bay will be at a record level.

REGULATIONS SET

Under insurance regulations first ships may pass through Hudson Strait into Hudson Bay on July 23 and the last vessel must clear Churchill by October 15.

Four ships are scheduled to bring cargo. The Warkworth of the Dalgleish Line and the Carnavon of the Furness Line each will make two voyages.

Cargoes include 13,000 cases of spirits for prairie liquor boards, generators, tractors, window glass, bone meal, confectionery, toys, spectacle cases, curling stones, biscuits and settlers' effects.

ELEVATOR FILLED

The big terminal elevator which towers like a sentinel over this flat, rocky coastline, has been filled with wheat to its 2,500,000-bushel capacity since last fall.

Work is proceeding around the clock on an extension of storage bins that will double the elevator's capacity.

In Saskatoon, Frank Eliason of the Hudson Bay Route Association, which has been urging greater use of Churchill for many years, said prospects are good for both increased grain shipments and incoming cargo.

He said the Furness company had entered the Churchill service for the first time this year and would load cargo for Western Canada in the heart of the industrial district at Manchester.

ENGLISH CEMENT

Cement for the elevator extension would be brought from England. English cement could not compete on the Prairies with Canadian cement but could be delivered at Churchill by ship cheaper than rail-carried Canadian cement.

In Winnipeg, the Shippers and Exporters Association said the private grain trade had arranged a large part of this year's Churchill shipments. It said the sales were the accumulative effort of many private grain exporters dealing with private interest in Great Britain during the last two months. The trade also had arranged ocean freight.

Bus Crash Injures 17

MONTREAL (CP)—An estimated 17 persons were injured, at least seven seriously, when a provincial transport bus left the road and crashed into a tree in the western suburb of Lachine early Saturday.

Bus company officials said the driver swerved to avoid a car and the corner of the vehicle smashed into the tree.

Dredger in Narrows Means Cut in Speed

A suction dredger will be operating in the First Narrows of Vancouver Harbor starting Wednesday, Col. Keith Dixon, marine agent of the department of transport, said yesterday.

The dredger will be located near Calamity Point Beacon and will work a distance of 3,000 feet, then return along the same line. A pipeline will be attached to the dredger and carried on floats above water to positions on the north shore.

The pipeline will be lit by red and white lights between sunset and sunrise, and in times of poor visibility. The dredger will carry normal lights and signals.

Mariners are instructed to pass to the south of the dredger and pipeline at all times, and proceed at the slowest possible any wake or swell which might damage the machines.

Three Injured In Car Wreck

A small car was totally wrecked and three young men injured when their car struck a power pole in the 2500-block Blanshard Street at 2.05 a.m. yesterday.

Albert Tervo, 18, of 1428 Wende Avenue, sustained head and back injuries and a compound fracture of his right arm. Donald Glass, 1463 Bromley Place, suffered a cut arm. J. A. Gilmour, 19, of 1600 McRae Avenue, whom police said was driving, was released from hospital yesterday after observation for possible head injuries.

FT. DIX, N.J. (AP) — The United States Army has relieved a lieutenant and a sergeant of their commands while investigating reports their company was forced to stand at attention in 90-degree heat for an hour.

Cup Back in City after 41 Years

(From AP and UP Dispatches)

HANOI, Indo-China—The people of this northern Indo-China metropolis have begun the rush to get out ahead of the Reds and Americans without urgent business were told Saturday to leave at once.

The anti-Communist Vietnamese are leaving by the hundreds daily for the less-menaced south rather than face the keen possibility of life under the Vietminh here.

All planes flying out of Hanoi were loaded and the airlines were booked up for more than two weeks.

Qualified observers estimated that 20,000 Viet Namese already had fled Hanoi. Supreme French Commander Gen. Paul Ely advised a delegation representing the capital's 6,000 Frenchmen to get out soon because the city probably will be a battleground, reliable sources said.

Rumors said Ely ordered an airlift to fly out the French either to Haiphong or Saigon.

British authorities have made preparations to bring Royal Air Force planes from Singapore to evacuate Commonwealth citizens if necessary, informed sources said.

SITUATION SERIOUS

Tension that could quickly flare into panic or desperate revolt spread among thousands who cannot pay the price of a plane ride over the surrounding jungles and mountains.

There are no safe roads leading out of Hanoi to the relative safety of Saigon, 700 miles away.

A mounting stream of refugees is pouring into Hanoi in front of the Vietminh attack. Between 75,000 and 100,000 refugees have swelled the normal population of 800,000.

DEEP HATRED

But for every Vietnamese here angry at the thought of a possible French retreat from this beleaguered city, there are uncounted others who have long nursed a deep hatred for their French colonial rulers.

If they become convinced the French are pulling out, an unfortunate incident could fan that smouldering resentment into a "last chance" bloodletting.

"The day I learn we have been sold out, I will take my gun, go into the streets, and shoot the first three French I see," one Vietnamese told an American here.

The French high command is acutely aware the situation could develop into a native uprising like the 1946 outbreak which killed hundreds of Europeans and Eurasians.

Jammed Horn Brings Aid

Rescuers were led to the scene of this accident last night by the blare of the car's horn, which jammed after the vehicle had skidded 210 feet, smashed over a 12-foot embankment, then slewed to a stop in heavy growth that concealed it off the West Saanich Road. Johnny Cooper, 26, of Saanich Post Office received serious head and knee lacerations; his wife, Rita, 22, suffered a bad eye injury, and the third passenger, Janet Paul, West Saanich Road, received injuries to her left hip. All three are in St. Joseph's Hospital.

Pleas to Dulles Renewed

Mendes-France Back in Geneva

GENEVA (AP)—French Premier Pierre Mendes-France flew to Geneva Saturday night and plunged immediately into tough negotiations for peace in Indo-China within the next 10 days.

The French leader, who has staked his premiership on obtaining peace by July 20, was the dinner guest of Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov within an hour after his arrival.

At the same time the British Foreign Office in London disclosed it has urgently renewed its suggestion to U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles that he return to the conference table here. This coincided with French representations to Dulles urging him to put in an appearance.

British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is expected to arrive here Monday and to lunch with Mendes-France. Red China's Foreign Minister Chou En-Lai is on his way to Geneva.

His arrival will complete the re-appearance here of the top foreign policy leaders of the Big Four powers and Red China except for Dulles.

50,000 Homeless

Raging Torrents Sweeping Europe

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Central Europe's worst floods in 50 years swept behind the Iron Curtain Saturday, pouring into the Czechoslovak capital of Prague.

In Austria and Germany up to 50,000 persons were believed homeless.

The Communist radio at Prague said parts of the Troja and Liben Islands in the Vltava Moldau River in the middle of Prague were under water.

Raging waters of the wreckage-filled Danube meanwhile poured into the Austrian steel city of Linz as a great inland sea built up in the heart of Germany's and Austria's richest farmland.

Hundreds of German and Austrian villages are under water. Many of them are deserted. Fourteen persons are known dead. Many are missing. Thousands, including hundreds of American troops, are engaged in rescue work.

Radio Prague said the mounting waters of the Danube also were threatening villages near Bratislava and along the Czech-Hungarian border. Czech army, police, border guards and fire brigades were busy evacuating them, the broadcast said.

Furniture Afloat In Downtown Trail

The rampaging Columbia River continued to rise in the flood-stricken Interior yesterday, but the Fraser River was going down slowly.

In Trail, floating porch furniture, boots, bottles, and tin cans drifted along the esplanade as streets near the river went under. Part of the downtown area was covered by three inches of water.

Seven sewer pumps have been put into operation to remove pressure built up by high water. Five families were forced to flee basement suites.

Civil defense officials and Mayor E. G. Fletcher still believe the situation "is a cause for concern but not alarm." River levels are still five feet below the peak of 1948.

North of Golden, two feet of water was lapping over a half-mile stretch of the Trans-Canada Highway, and on the Kootenay-Columbia Highway two 500-foot stretches were inundated.

The Kimberley-Wasa-Fort road was closed.

At Castlegar the Columbia rose five inches. An emergency water supply system had to be set up.

Diplomats Act Undiplomatic

LONDON (Reuters)—Two unidentified diplomats were wounded Saturday in a gunfight near Buckingham Palace.

The shooting took place in the vicinity of the Dominican Republic consulate, Scotland Yard announced, but diplomatic immunity was immediately clamped on the case. The wounded men are officials of the Dominican consulate.

One of the men fell at the foot of the consulate steps while the other staggered around a corner and collapsed. Both are in critical condition in hospital.

Princess' Visit to Bonn Hailed by West Germans

BONN (AP) — The visit of Princess Margaret to Bonn next Monday is regarded by the German government as another welcome sign of West Germany's increasing role in world affairs.

The 23-year-old Margaret will be the first member of the British Royal Family to come to the West German capital.

There have been frequent visits by members of the family, such as the Dukes of Edinburgh and Gloucester and the Princess Royal to the British zone since the war. But they have confined themselves to inspecting British troops and have paid no official calls on the German authorities.

The Adenauer government said her visit demonstrates the federal republic's equal place among the Western nations.

Swiss Bar Investigators

BERN, Switzerland (UP) — Switzerland has refused a U.S. loyalty board permission to enter this neutral nation to investigate Americans employed by the United Nations, reliable sources said Saturday night.

Ratify Pact or...

U.S. May End Aid To France, Italy

WASHINGTON (AP)—An abrupt end of all foreign aid to France and Italy unless those two countries ratify the long-stalled European defense army or an acceptable substitute by December 31 was recommended Saturday by the senate foreign relations committee.

The decision was made a tentative part of the big foreign aid bill and acting chairman H. Alexander Smith (R.N.J.) said it would be sent on to the Senate floor Monday unless the State Department protests that it would cause "some dire trouble."

If approved by Congress and President Eisenhower, the threatened cutoff of U.S. aid funds and supplies would be the most drastic step taken thus far in efforts to end the stalemate over plans for a six-nation European army.

In another action, the foreign relations committee hammered a "keep Red China out of the United Nations" notice onto the global aid bill.

The notice, with a request for instructions from President Eisenhower if it is ignored, was put there for all the world to see at the insistence of Sen. Knowland of California, the Republican Senate floor leader.

It was a modified version of the "or else we quit" sign which Knowland first proposed as an integral part of the bill authorizing more than $3,000,000,000 in U.S. aid to Western allies during the 12 months that started July 1.

Knowland, in announcing the committee's acceptance of his proposal, declared he was not swerved "one iota" from his determination to resign his senate leadership post and devote all of his energies to pulling this country and its financial support out of the UN if Red China is admitted.

Terrorists Kill Five French

FERRYVILLE, Tunisia (UP) —Five Frenchmen were machine-gunned to death and nine others wounded last night in the worst outbreak or terrorist violence in two months.

Atom Strike Called Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — A strike threatening production of atomic and hydrogen bombs was called off Saturday and a "gratified" President Eisenhower discarded plans to seek a Taft-Hartley Law injunction against it.

CIO atomic workers voted 329-96 to return to work immediately at the atomic energy project near Paducah, Ky., reversing a decision Friday night to continue the walkout.

Six Rescued On Yacht

WOODS HOLE, Mass., (UP) — The coast guard said it rescued Marshall Field, Chicago publisher and department store heir, with his wife and four other persons Saturday after his luxury yacht stuck fast on a rocky ledge in the Outer Woods Hole Harbor.

Field, 60, his wife Ruth, 57, their 15-year-old daughter Fiona and three professional crew men were taken ashore as the yacht lay over on its side.

Bowler-Wearers Sure of Salute

LONDON (Reuters) — A public controversy exploded Saturday over an order requiring the plumed, red-coated sentries of Britain's Horse Guards to salute all gentlemen passers-by wearing "bowler" hats and carrying umbrellas.

The mass-circulation Daily Mirror disclosed that the order had been put through to ensure salutes for off-duty Guards officers, who are required by regulations to wear derby-style bowlers and carry tightly-rolled umbrellas when not in uniform.

Guards officers rate a salute from sentries even when in civilian attire and are supposed to respond by tipping their bowlers. But sentries, confused by swarms of passing bowlers, frequently failed to recognize and salute their commanders, The Mirror said. The lack of recognition angered young officers strolling down the street with debutante girl friends.

Pin-up photographs of officers' features in guardsmen's barracks failed to solve the recognition problem, The Mirror said. So the order went out that "all Guardsmen will salute all men who walk through Horse Guards parade dressed in bowlers and carrying umbrellas."

Plane Battles Storm

Mattfolk was struck down by a thrashing steel cable while working at Sidney Bay Logging Company near Rock Bay, 30 miles north of here.

Dr. N. B. Hall was flown to the accident scene by pilot Wally Wiggins. The small plane was buffeted by the gale before it landed on Campbell River shortly before 9 p.m.

Brownie Keeps Vigil on Grave of Boy He Loved

Bereaved Dog Dying of Broken Heart

BOYNE CITY, Mich. (UP) — Brownie, a mongrel dog who traveled 16 miles to keep a vigil on the grave of the only real friend he ever had, his seven-year-old master, appeared yesterday to be dying from a broken heart.

The dog, disappeared from the Sobleski home this week after waiting for more than two weeks for Raymond to come riding up on his bicycle again. He was found three days later, lying on the boy's grave.

Marell Abbey, county dog warden and Humane Society worker, said the dog seemed to be dying from a broken heart.

Lyle Gerrin, who operates a boarding house near St. Francis Cemetery in Petoskey, where the boy was buried after drowning in Deer Lake three weeks ago, said the dog had kept vigil on the grave for two days.

Brownie's paws were bruised and badly cut from the long journey. A veterinarian patched up the paws. But the boy's father, Raymond, Sr., said no one has been able to cheer up the dog.

"What can a vet or anybody do for a broken heart?" the father asked.

Brownie had been to the cemetery twice before his journey this week. He had attended the boy's funeral and had visited the grave once with the family. Each time they had a hard time getting the dog to leave.

He and Raymond had been inseparable ever since Raymond got the dog when Brownie was weaned 14 months ago. They were a familiar sight in the neighborhood. Raymond rode his bike and Brownie loped alongside.

After the funeral Brownie sat and waited for more than two weeks for Raymond to return home before he traveled to the grave.

The family tried to interest Brownie in the younger children in the family, a boy and a girl. But the best Brownie ever managed was a feeble wag of his tail.

The dog's vigil was discovered by Gerrin. He said Brownie only left the grave when he saw boys nearby. He said Brownie then would run to the boys, inspect them closely, and limp back to the grave.

Gerrin thought Brownie was a stray. He tried to chase him unsuccessfully, then turned his own dog on Brownie.

"But I couldn't get my dog to drive him off," he said. "Somehow he knew something and wouldn't chase him."
